STATE TO STOP MENACE FROM R. R. CROSSINGS

Relief from the unprotected railroad grade-crossing menace came into sight today when the State moved for the installation of additional safeguards at such crossings—in addition even to those required of the railroads by law.

The State Highway Commission recommended the installation of additional safeguards to the Public Utilities Commission, as a direct result of the Boston Evening American's campaign, according to Frank E. Lyman, associate highway commissioner.

Commissioner Lyman, one of the two commissioners who considered the problem and decided on the move, said today:

"The Boston American's campaign for better protected grade crossings was the chief influence with me in arriving at the decision that there should be additional safeguards at grade crossings.

"I have followed closely the articles in the Boston American each day on these crossings.

"Of course, the nature of my work here on the commission brings me in contact with these things, but

The Most Enthusiastic Japan Wants Ships. O. K. Industries Could Help S. O. of Indiana

NEW YORK may not be quite the biggest city in the world. London has 7,400,000 population—but yesterday New York was at least the most ENTHUSIASTIC city in the world.

No man, anywhere, ever had so great a reception, so many millions cheering, so many thousands of automobiles struggling for room in the streets.

Imagine the greatest demonstration that you CAN imagine, multiply it by ten, and you will fall short of reality.

IT WAS a great test for Lindbergh when he started out, barely clearing the Long Island trees, with his heavy load of gasoline, a few days ago.

A bigger test comes now, when the shouting dies away, and his common sense is called upon to find a place, and his balance, in the great nation that cheers for ten hours, and forgets in a week.

THE MILLIONS who saw Lindbergh yesterday saw in his face his foreign extraction and Scandinavian blood. He has not been transformed into a "one hundred per cent." automaton. That's one reason why he flew across the Atlantic all by himself, instead of going to a drug store to order a nut sundae.

IT IS announced that Japan, at the Geneva Naval Conference, will demand an equal ratio with the United States. Japan in fact claims the right "to more

CLOUDS AND DRIFTS OF CONFETTI SHOWERED ON AIR HERO

Snow and sleet over the vast reaches of the Atlantic challenged Lindy and the Spirit of St. Louis in their solitary flight, but the paper snow of the Spirit of New York almost overwhelmed him when the joyous multitude of millions roared him a welcome such as man before had never witnessed in the American metropolis.

N. Y.-PARIS FLIGHT HERO INSISTS THAT HE WON'T ACCEPT ANY 'BIG MONEY'

THE DAY WITH LINDY.

Talk of plan for a tour of America in his own plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, in the interest of aviation.

Visits Long Island aviation fields and compliments those who helped him before his hop to Paris and yesterday when he arrived from Washington.

Has most of the day to himself because of cancellation of songfest at Central Park, New York, where 100,000 children were to sing. The cancellation was due to heavy rain.

Considers plan to go to Washington for his own plane, so as to fly with it from Mitchel Field, New York, to St. Louis on Friday.

Eludes newspaper men, goes to Curtiss Field and enjoys 15-minute flight in an Oriole plane.

Will be guest at City of New York banquet at Commodore Hotel tonight; 3,500 guests to attend.

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is considering a tour of many of the cities of the country in his plane, he said in an interview today. If he decides to make it, the trip will be undertaken solely with a view to stimulating interest in aviation at a time when everyone is talking of airplanes and aviators.

MONAGLE'S DAUGHTER IDENTIFIES GLEASON

Herbert J. Gleason, twenty-year-old Jamaica Plain youth on trial for murder, was identified in Middlesex Superior Court today by fifteen-year-old Mary Monagle as one of two holdup men who shot at her and her father, James Monagle on the murder night in Monagle's Medford store.

The Jamaica Plain boy is charged with the murder of Monagle on the night of last November 27.

Little Mary, plump and childish despite her flowing black straw hat she wore on the stand, pointed out Gleason as the leader of the pair who entered the store and as the youth who cried, "Hands up," then shot at her and her father.

Mary said she "ducked under the counter" and fled at the sound of

BYRD MAY START PARIS HOP TOMORROW NIGHT

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Commenting on reports that he planned to hop off for France tomorrow night or early Thursday morning, Commander Richard E. Byrd said today that he would not leave until the weather was propitious. He declined to comment on the report that his projected flight would be a round trip with only a brief stop in Paris.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., June 14 (A.P.)—A man close to the flying camp of Commander Richard Byrd, who asked that his identity be shielded, told the Associated Press today that, weather permitting, Byrd will hop off either tomorrow night or Thursday morning for a round-trip European flight, stopping in Paris only a few hours.

This man expressed the opinion, which he said was of his own knowledge, that the early takeoff would be made so that Charles Lindbergh might be present to wish luck to

JONES TRAILS COOPER AT END OF 18 HOLES

Oakmont, Pa., June 14 (A.P.).—Finding varieties of trouble after a flashy getaway, Bobby Jones, the defending titleholder, wound up with a 76, four over par, for the first 18 holes of the 72-hole American open golf championship here today.

An "eagle" three on the par five first hole sent the Atlanta amateur away flying, but he began finding difficulties on the fourth hole, where he took three shots in a sand trap.

From then on he had periodic lapses, particularly with his approaches, and only some exceptional putting saved him from compiling a higher score.

The champion had four single putt greens on the outward nine and two coming home, ranging 10 to 45 feet.

After making the turn even with par, Jones went steadily until the fifteenth, where he took a six, two over par, losing another stroke to par on the sixteenth and a fourth on the home green where he required three putts.

Police Made Way for Lindy ~ In Wildest Demonstration ~ New York Ever Witnessed

MOUNTED OFFICERS HOLD CROWDS BACK

Surging millions in the streets of New York, all eager to get a glimpse of Colonel Lindbergh, made it difficult for the police to clear a lane wide enough for him to pass through.

FLYING OVER LONG ISLAND FROM MITCHEL FIELD

LINDBERGH CONSIDERS PLAN TO TOUR NATION BY PLANE

His itinerary for such a tour, should it be undertaken, has not even been sketched, Lindbergh said, but he believes it might be helpful to the cause for which he made his long hop.

Asked whether he planned to accept any of the "big money" offers by various commercial interests, Lindbergh replied: "No. I thought I had made that clear some time ago."

Asked how it felt to be the "most famous man in the country," he replied:

"Oh, I don't want to go into the personal part."

GOING TO ST. LOUIS

"Will you go on home from here?" he was asked and he replied:

"St. Louis is my home. I shall go there."

"Will your mother fly back with you?" he was next asked.

"Well, hardly," was the smiling answer. "The plane won't hold two."

"What was the biggest thrill you got yesterday?"

Lindbergh guessed that "you follow" could answer that.

"What do you think of Mayor Walker and Governor Smith?"

"Oh, I don't care to go into anything like that."

"Do you think that your reception in France was a tribute to you or to the American people?"

"Oh, it wasn't intended as a demonstration for me. It was a demonstration of French friendship toward this country."

Asked if he would see Commander Byrd hop off on the event that Byrd decided to try for Europe this week, Lindbergh replied:

Praise for Others

"I should very much like to see Commander Byrd off. But of course it isn't possible for him to set a definite date. The weather will settle that. A flight by Byrd would be a great step in the advancement of transatlantic flying."

Lindbergh complimented Clarence D Chamberlin who, he recalled, had run "into some pretty bad weather" and had "put in ship across under great difficulties.

"And remember," he added, "he broke the long distance record."

A reporter asked if he was fatigued after his strenuous week-end in Washington and the reception here yesterday.

"I have noticed that I am," answered Lindbergh with a smile. As the reporters scribbled down his answer he broke in:

"Wait a minute—I mean I've read about. I really haven't felt any fatigue since the flight started."

He was asked whether he had delivered the letters of introduction with which he had equipped himself before he left for Paris.

"Yes, I delivered them," he said, seriously.

As Lindbergh was carrying one direct question concerning his personal plans, Richard Blythe, his adviser, came into the room.

"What's the matter, are the boys getting a bit rough, Lindy?" he asked.

TALKS OF PLANE

"Oh, not at all," was the laughing reply.

Declining to speak of himself, Lindbergh was always ready to talk of his plane. He explained that the "whip" had flown only 66 hours and that the life of such a machine was about 1,000 hours.

The motor, which he did not hesitate to say was "the best in the world," was good for 250 hours without overhauling, and from 1,000 to 1,500 hours if completely overhauled.

A questioner asked if he intended to keep "The Spirit of St. Louis" or donate it to a museum. Colonel Lindbergh said he had made no definite

LINDY'S CRUISER DUE IN BOSTON TOMORROW

S. cruiser Memphis will arrive at the Boston Navy Yard tomorrow at 7:30 a. m. Also, tomorrow, will arrive the cruiser Detroit, but while the Memphis will remain here indefinitely, the Detroit will steam out of the harbor again on Thursday.

NEW HOPE FOR NUNGESSER

Quebec, Que., June 14 (A.P.).—The possibility that Captains Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, missing French trans-Atlantic aviators, may be stranded in North Quebec was raised today by receipt of a telegram from a forestry employe at St. Germain Township, north of the Saguenay River.

The man stated that for half an hour on Sunday night distress signals in the form of flares sent up at intervals of about three minutes were seen in the mountains by four persons.

The flares used were modern. Indians or trappers in that region would light only fires in case of distress.

STATE ACTS ON 'DEATH TRAP' CROSSINGS

It was surprised to find that there were so many crossings that could be better protected."

The Highway Commission's recommendation for more safeguards was contained in a letter written to Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the Public Utilities Commission.

Chairman Williams said in his letter, which follows:

"In view of the number of fatal accidents at railroad grade crossings and the great increase in the use of public ways by motor vehicles, the Division of Highways respectfully urges your consideration of the installation of additional safeguards at these crossings by the railroads, especially at crossings which are protected during the daylight hours by flagmen or gates, but do not have this protection during the night or after the regular passenger train schedule is completed, when specials and freight trains are operated on schedules not known by the general public.

"The Division would be glad to co-operate with your Department in so far as its funds will permit, by the installation of signals or other warning devices in addition to those now required by law, on the highways approaching grade crossings, wherever in your judgment they may be required to supplement the protection to be provided by the railroad.

"The Division would be pleased to confer with you on this matter if it meets with your approval, at such time as may be arranged to meet our mutual convenience."

Cooley Hotel Head Dead

If You're a Flapper Watch Out for Your Teeth

The flapper and the cake-eater, with their night life and midnight meals, are showing it in their teeth, Dr. Henry A. Barry of Salem, president of the New England Dental Society, told 1,500 dentists at the society's convention today in the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Smoking and drinking of alcoholics, the doctor declared, do not harm the teeth, but the parents in wealthy families do handicap those of their children.

Dr. Barry explained that the reason children in comparatively poor homes have good teeth, while children of wealth have poor grinders, is because the former are fed on nourishing, hard foods, while the wealthy kids are pampered with rich, soft substances and much candy.

TORONTO PASTOR TURNS DOWN HUB CHURCH OFFER

Toronto, Ont., June 14 (A.P.).—Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, minister of old St. Andrews' United Church here, has declined an invitation to become pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Boston.

By Associated Press.

Members of the parish committee of the Central Congregational Church today denied that a call had been extended to Dr. J. R. P. Sclater of Toronto. Dr. Allen Sweet of the committee said that the pastorate was vacant, but that no definite steps had been taken to fill it.

AUTO CRASHES CAPE TRAIN; DRIVER ESCAPES DEATH

Titicut, June 14 (A.P.).—Ernest Newcomb, a guard at the State Farm, narrowly escaped death when failing to see the warning signals, he drove his auto directly into the Cape-bound express from Boston, striking the first Pullman car.

Newcomb was hurled through the roof of his auto, landing on his face in the road. The auto was wrecked and the Pullman car so badly damaged it was dropped from the train at Middleboro. Newcomb suffered severe bruises and abrasions

ORDER LICENSE OF ENGINEER RESTORED

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin was overruled today in his suspension of the automobile driver's license of Adolph A. Bartel of Taunton who, while operating a New Haven railroad gasoline locomotive, figured in an accident in which two persons were killed.

The board of appeals of the State Department of Public Works restored the license of Bartel. Hitherto Registrar Goodwin has been virtually all-powerful in control of automobile drivers' licenses.

The case was peculiar in that the registrar, while having no jurisdiction over Bartel's right to act as engineer of a railroad engine of any kind, took away his right to drive his private automobile. Bartel was exonerated of all blame in the grade crossing accident at the inquest following the fatal collision, which occurred at Barnstable.

Commissioner of Public Works William F. Williams and Associate Commissioner Frank E. Lyman made the decision which overruled Registrar Goodwin.

At the hearing on the appeal last week counsel for Bartel declared there was nothing to show that Bartel was not a proper person to operate an automobile, as Goodwin had decreed in suspending the license. No one from the registrar's office appeared to oppose Bartel's appeal.

"WIDOW'S MITE" GOES TO GRIEF-STRICKEN FATHER

A "widow's mite" will go towards making restitution for William Halliday, Cambridge father, who pleaded guilty to forging checks so that he could bury his dead baby.

Today Judge David F. Dillon, who placed the grief-stricken father on probation to give him another chance, received a letter from a Cambridge widow enclosing $5 and asking that the judge put it toward the money Halliday owes.

BYRD MAY HOP OVER OCEAN TOMORROW

Byrd, just as Byrd wished him luck when he took off.

The round trip with brief stop off had been decided on, he stated, because it was believed Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine intended to fly home from Europe and that therefore a one-way flight would no longer have any great originality.

At the Byrd hangar at Roosevelt Field mechanics professed ignorance about the plans for a round trip flight but there seemed to be a feeling of excitement and secrecy about the hangar which suggested that something unusual was in the air.

The tri-motored Fokker "America," which will be manned by Byrd and Bert Acosta, who, with Chamberlin, holds the world record for endurance flying, was said to be ready for a hop off whenever it should be decided to leave.

It was learned today that the food decided on for a transatlantic flight had been stowed aboard the America and that the gas tanks were filled. The light landing gear has also been changed for the transatlantic wheels, indicating that no more test flying was planned before the takeoff.

AUTO COLLECTOR BEATEN BY WOMAN'S HUSBAND

Calvin McKentrie of Montvale street, Roslindale, a collector for a finance company, is at the Waltham Hospital suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and contusions of the body as a result of endeavoring to collect an automobile account from a Waltham man.

McKentrie, according to his story to the Waltham police, went to a house to collect the automobile payment from the woman of the house and when an argument ensued her husband assaulted him with a brick, he says. The Waltham police are investigating.

PROF. FISHER

Harvard Observatory research expert has set [illegible] of the north [illegible] assistance.

MAY BE SEEN IN BOSTON LOW IN SOUTHWEST

Our earth will get between the sun and the moon tomorrow to cause a total eclipse of the moon. The celestial phenomenon will be visible from practically all parts of the United States. In this diagram you see the positions to be assumed by the planets involved. The earth will block the light coming from the sun, 93,000,000 miles away. The first shadow will touch the moon 1:34 a. m. tomorrow (Boston time). The partial eclipse begins 2:43 a. m., with totality beginning at 4:14 and lasting to 4:35 a. m. Those anxious to see the phenomenon will have to get up early.

ESKIMOS WILL GET GOOD VIEW

Prof. Fisher has instructed by radio his helpers in the far north to observe carefully the different phases of the great event. He has enlisted trappers, traders, mounted police and even the more intelligent of the natives in his effort to make records which will aid navigation in the way tides are affected by the atmosphere and the atmosphere by the moon.

MRS. DENSMORE SAYS SHE NEVER KEPT TRYSTS

Mrs. Florence Densmore, charged in Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham with having held trysts at the Boston Yacht Club with George B. Doane, wealthy Brookline yachtsman, today denied that she had any personal interest in Doane save that they were both interested in boating.

Mrs. Densmore, who was on the witness stand for several hours, said:

"My friendship for Mr. Doane has been more closely associated because of boats. I have no other man friend who has the same interest in boats."

"Isn't it true that in the past year you have shown more real affection for Mr. Doane than you have for your own husband?" counsel for Mrs. Doane asked her.

"I have not," replied the witness.

CASH D CHECK FOR HER.

Q.—Have your feelings for Mr. Doane been anything but those of friendship? A.—I have treated him only as a friend, as I would treat other friends.

Mrs. Densmore denied that she had ever called at the yachtsman at his apartments in Brookline when no one else was present.

Q.—Do you know where Mr. Doane's apartment is in the Beacon-field Hotel? A.—Yes. I went there to see his mother.

Q.—Have you ever been in Mr. Doane's apartment when his mother was not there? A.—No, never!

Q.—Did you get any money from Mr. Doane? A.—He cashed a check for me at Buzzards Bay one time. There were no banks around where I could get the money.

Counsel for Mrs. Doane endeavored to show that the Brookline yachtsman was a frequent caller at the Densmore home.

GOT GIFTS AT XMAS.

Q.—Was Mr. Doan ever called at your home since 1924? A.—Yes, in 1924 he called three or four times.

Q.—In 1925 did he call? A.—It would be only a guess if I told you how many times he came to see me I don't know the number.

Q.—In 1926 how often did he come to see you? A.—In the Winter he came over to play bridge. There were always friends present when he called.

Q.—Did you get any gifts from time to time from Mr. Doane? A.—At Christmas time, yes. At other times no.

A certified copy of the divorce suit which Mrs. Densmore has entered against her husband was introduced as evidence in the case.

FINDS FRIEND DEAD ON MOUNTAIN TRAIL

Fryeburg, Maine, June 14 (A.P.)—Maynard Wentworth, of Denmark, was found dead on the trail down Pleasant Mountain by Philip Walker, lookout man for the forest service, who had been Wentworth's companion on a hike to the summit of the mountain.

Physicians declared Wentworth, who is a man of middle age, died of heart disease. He is survived by a widow in Denmark.

FULLER TALKS WITH SACCO JURORS

Members of the jury that found Bartolomeo Vanzetti guilty of attempted robbery, resulting in a long sentence for him at State Prison prior to his trial with Nicola Sacco on the murder charges, were interviewed today by Governor Fuller at the State House.

The Governor has been investigating this case for several days and his questioning of the jurors today is believed to indicate that he is nearly finished with this angle of his inquiry, and perhaps will go through with his entire Sacco-Vanzetti investigation.

Vanzetti, following his arrest with Sacco for the murder of a paymaster and guard in South Braintree, was taken to Plymouth and tried for an alleged attempted hold-up in Bridgewater. He was found guilty and sentenced to 12 to 15 years, and he was serving this sentence when tried and convicted with Sacco on the murder charge.

Only eleven of the 12 jurors in the Plymouth County trial are living. The first of these to see the Governor today was Henry S. Burgess of Wareham. Others called in for interviews were James R. Dunham, Middleboro; Arthur S. Nickerson, Plymouth; Charles C. Wilbur, Kingston; Arthur W. Bourne, Hanson; Edwin P. Ritchfield, Pembroke; Andrew J. O'Connor, Rockland; Joseph Frawley, Brockton; Oliver B. Poole, Brockton; Simon M. Sullivan, Brockton; Charles A. Gale, Norwell.

JEROME K. JEROME DIES IN ENGLISH HOSPITAL

Northampton, Eng., June 14 (A.P.).—Jerome K. Jerome, sixty-eight, noted British author, died at a Northampton Hospital today from cerebral hemorrhage.

TODAY

cruisers and other auxiliaries than America," because she has such long trade routes to protect.

IF THIS country and its government would build the necessary fleets of airplanes and submarines, we could say to other nations: "Build battleships, cruisers, etc., to your hearts' content. But keep them away from our coast when you are not friendly."

IF WE BUILT as many swift planes as our post office and our great industries could use, and if a few of our great industries, General Motors for instance, and the big locomotive companies would compete with Henry Ford in airplane construction there would be no need to worry about other nations or their floating targets.

GREAT INDUSTRIES arranging their planes to serve as pursuit planes and bombing planes, carrying rapid fire guns in war, could give this country absolute protection, on a self-supporting basis.

Then the government might drowse along with its battleships, its old-fashioned army and navy dodos, and do no harm.

STANDARD OIL of Indiana sets an excellent example to other great industries. Its chairman and board of directors use a three-engine, double-control, all-metal monoplane built by Ford, and invite citizens of consequence to fly with them.

Recently, at St. Joseph, Mo., the "Stanolind," Standard Oil of Indiana's airship, was inspected by 25,000 people, and took up 128 prominent citizens to test the machine.

A LETTER just received from Allan Jackson, vice-president of Standard Oil of Indiana, gives interesting information.

The oil company at the end of the war began working on gasoline and lubricating oil especially for flying machines such as "would never be the cause of engine failure." Agents were ordered to deliver these products to aviators wherever called on "regardless of expense, distance and time of day."

AND STANDARD OIL, to help aviators locate themselves in flight, marks in big letters on the roof of all Standard Oil stations the name of the town and will soon have 3,000 towns thus marked.

IMPORTANT to Americans who ask, "Does it pay?" is the concluding paragraph of Mr. Jackson's letter.

"It may interest you to know that when flying eighty-five miles an hour a three-motored plane, carrying eight passengers and two pilots, consumes about thirty-three gallons of gasoline. With the present cost of aviation gasoline, I figure that the cost per mile per passenger is one cent."

That's less than half the cost of railroad travel, and flying is only starting. Those now living will fly to Europe at $50 or less for the round trip.

STORY OF FATAL HOLDUP TOLD AT TRIAL

the first shot, collapsing in Ellsmere court nearby.

Bullets taken from the body of Monagle fit the shells found in Monagle's store, and the shells fit the pistol alleged to have been used by Gleason in the murder, it was testified by Captain Charles A. Van Amburgh, State firearms expert.

The firearms expert took the stand after a previous witness had painted a picture of Monagle as a man whom creeping death had halted in his chase after the two youths who held him up in his store.

Gleason is alleged to have fired the shots that killed James Monagle, Main street, South Medford, shopkeeper, last November, during an attempted holdup in company with another youth not yet captured.

By Joseph Paulsen of Dexter street, Medford, nearby resident and the first witness for the prosecution, the incidents directly after the shooting and chase were told to the jury following District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell's opening.

Paulsen testified that he was in a haberdashery store in Main street on the night of the holdup and heard several shots fired.

"I ran out of the store," testified Paulsen, "and saw Mr. Monagle standing outside on the sidewalk. I had known him for about six months. He had on his white coat or apron and it was covered with blood and he was swaying.

"He said, 'Call assistance, I'm done.'

Gleason was identified in court by Mrs. May F. Ewing of Ellsmere terrace, Medford, as one of three youths talking beneath a rear window of her home at 10:30 on the murder night, just before Mary Monagle, daughter of the murdered man came running into the terrace and collapsed on Mrs. Ewing's doorstep crying, "My father, my father."

Mrs. Ewing said she was looking out a window of her home when she saw the youthful trio come over her back fence and then stand beneath the window, conversing, within four feet of her.

FOUND WEAPON IN SHOP.

Mrs. Eleanor Donovan of Dexter street testified that she saw Patrolman Thomas F. Duffy of Medford chasing two men down Main street after she had heard shots fired. Later she went into Monagle's store and saw him bleeding before he went to the hospital.

A third witness, Patrolman Thomas J. Kerwan of Medford, testified he was on station duty when he received a call to go to the Monagle shop, and that when he arrived he saw a revolver or pistol lying on the floor in front of a chopping block.

This pistol, the officer said, was picked up by Sergt. John A. Buttam, but the patrolman, himself, picked up three shells ejected from a gu

Miss Angela Federini, 18, now o Medford street, Medford, but la November living in Edwards stree not far from the Monagle store, sa she found a gun in her backyar on the day following the murder.

IDENTIFIES ONE GUN.

Sergeant Buffam testified that h picked up a gun in front of Mo sale's chopping block, but he coul not identify a gun shown him a the gun he picked up. From th gun, he said, he took no numbers o peculiar marks.

When shown the other gun, how ever—the alleged murder gun—h identified it as the one turned ove to him after being found in the 25 wards street yard.

THE GATEWAY OF ACHING HEARTS

ACCUSED SAYER AND HIS DIVORCED PARENTS

This tragic scene was snaped at gates to Cambridge jail as Herbert I. Gleason, accused Medford slayer, was beingid toward court where he faces trial for life. On either side of the gates stand his mothr and father. They are divorced. Longingly, lovingly each eyed their manacled son uil he had passed from sight. Then they sorrowfully turned away and parted without seaking.

JUDGE PRAISES SERGT. M'NABB

"One of the best if not the best officer in the department."

Those were the words in which Judge Michael J. Creed expressed his opinion in Municipal Court today on Sergeant Frank McNabb of the Back Bay station as the officer stood, embarrassed by the praise like a flustered boy. McNabb a moment before had testified in the case of Amerigo Naradini, charged with violation of the alien arms law, and a woman arrested by raiding officers, charged with a statutory offense. McNabb said he believed the girl was innocent, as he had learned she merely lived in the house with Naradini. Then Naradini's counsel accidentally pointed the gun in question towards the bench.

McNabb leaped across and caught the gun. "It might be loaded," he said. "Any gun might be."

MYSTERY FIRE IN CHURCH

Dracut, June 14.—Firehugs today set fire to the First Evangelical Congregational Church and a shed on the property of Mrs. Herbert Lyon, an active worker in the church's affairs.

After a stubborn fight lasting two hours, firemen saved the church which was damaged considerably about the front entrance and tower. The church is in the Collinsville section and is one of the oldest in the State, having been built in 1834.

Two men, believed to be the firebugs, attracted the attention of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gosselin by shouting a warning that the building was on fire. They then fled.

About two hours earlier Mr. and Mrs. Lyon were awakened by the barking of their St. Bernard dog and found a heap of rubbish burning against a shed near their house. They saw two men running away as they ran to extinguish the blaze.

Fire Chief Richardson has requested the State Fire Marshal to make an investigation.

Providence, June 14 (A.P.)—It was with a heavy heart that Louis La March, 83-year-old veteran of the war of the rebellion and a native of Quebec, hung out an American flag in front of hi home in Valley Falls in recognition of Flag Day.

After living in this country for nearly three decades and serving in its army for more than a year, he has discovered that he is not a citizen and that he must wait three months more before he can take the oath of allegiance.

For more than 60 years he had believed that his war service made him a citizen.

FOUR CHILDREN RESCUED IN MALDEN FIRE

Four children, the youngest two years old and the oldest but five, were rescued from a smoke-filled apartment today in Reigh's block, Maplewood square, Malden, during a fire giving off particularly pungent clouds.

Patrolman Thomas J. Burke and a drug store clerk, Robert Leather, tucked two youngsters each under their arms and groped their way down the stairs of the burning block, while six older children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garland, and the parents themselves were making their own way to safety.

The Garland children rescued were Harris, two; Eleanor, three; Aubrey, four, and Marion, 5. In the family as the eldest of the ten is Helen, seventeen years.

Excepting for the Garland apartment, the entire block, numbered 683-695 Salem street and 19-23 Lebanon street, is untenanted because of alterations to apartments and stores.

Leather discovered the fire just as Patrolman Burke came along on his beat and they went into the building together.

The fire is believed to have started in the basement of a vacant store on the corner, but the damage was slight.

WHITE GOT RID OF FILES, SAYS WITNESS

Norman H. White, Brookline bankrupt destroyed nearly half of the business files of Small, Maynard Company and the Boston Bookbinding Company a month before their bankruptcy petitions were filed, according to testimony given in Federal Court today before Referee in Bankruptcy Arthur Black by Charles W. Sheen, for fifteen years confidential secretary to White and official in both companies.

The hearing before the referee is on a petition of the trustees of White's estate seeking to have him turn over to them a sum in excess of $1,700,000, alleged to have been concealed by him prior to his bankruptcy.

The witness told the court that White said he was destroying the files "to make things easier for the receivers."

In reply to direct examination by Lowell A. Mayberry, one of the White trustees, Sheen said the accounts of White and those of the two companies he controlled were always in a jumbled condition and were switched from book to book indiscriminately.

Sheen identified a list of banks fourteen in all, in this and contiguous States, in which White had a personal account over the past four years and gave it as his opinion that in that time the total deposits to the credit of White was in excess of $6,000,000.

White, when his bankruptcy petition was filed in Federal Court in March last, listed liabilities of $1,128,548 and assets of $22,003.

PEPPER TRAIL IN GIRL SLAYING

Red pepper is the outstanding clue upon which Massachusetts State detectives and the Salisbury police hope to bring to justice the slayer of Stella Kale, whose body was found on the sands of Salisbury beach a week ago Sunday.

George Elmer Harrison Taylor, the itinerant barber who is charged with the slaying of the girl, and who fled toward the Canadian border after the crime, has a penchant for salad containing a liberal portion of red pepper. The police have learned that the barber invariably orders such a salad and on this slight clue the detectives believe they can eventually locate the suspect.

A reward may be offered by the Salisbury Beach selectmen for more information concerning the fugitive. Girls there are carrying protective weapons since the murder, the police have discovered. One was found to be carrying a pair of shoes, another a paring knife and a third a screw-driver.

After combing the underworld of Montreal, State Detective Richard J. Griffin, who has charge of the manhunt, today returned to Newport, Vt., convinced that the slayer is still on the American side of the border.

He is convinced that Taylor is in hiding in one of the many small towns near the border. In company with Chief Sidney Smith and Patrolman Glenn Clark of the Salisbury police force, he plans to visit St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Laconia, N. H., today, at both of which places suspects are under arrest.

The Essex county authorities today were inclined to attach considerable more importance to the marks on the left hand of the slain girl. It is likely that a court order will be sought for the exhuming of the body that these marks may be more carefully measured and photographed.

The marks apparently were made by a man's teeth and on this slender bit of evidence the authorities believe they can complete their case once the suspected barber is located.

DORCHESTER MAN HELD IN FATAL AUTO CRASH

Thompsonville, Ct., June 14.—John J. Davis, twenty-three, of Dorchester, Mass., was held here today, charged with being the driver of an auto which figured in a crash killing a baby girl and injuring six persons. He was unable to furnish bonds of $1,000.

According to police, his auto cut out of line and crashed head on with one driven by Joseph Kennedy of Hartford. Kennedy's ten-month-old daughter, Dorothy, was killed and six persons were taken to nearby hospitals. Among the injured was a girl giving her name as Albertn Babb of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

Davis was dazed in the crash and was unable to tell what had happened. Police say he is a former Tech student.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN CRISIS IS BELIEVED AVERTED

London, June 14 (A.P.).—The threatened Anglo-Egyptian crisis is believed to have been averted. A note from the Egyptian Premier received by Lord Lloyd, British high commissioner, is understood to offer the basis for negotiations regarding the Egyptian army problems.

Under the Constitution of April 19, 1923, declaring Egypt a sovereign state, the question of defense was reserved, remaining under British control. The sirdar, or commander-in-chief, and a few of the other higher army posts are held by British officers. A movement has been under way in Egypt to remove these in favor of Egyptians.

SEIZE RUM AND OPIUM ON LINER

Fifty-eight bottles of Scotch whiskey today were added to Uncle Sam's cache at the Appraisers' Stores, following a visit by Deputy Collector "Tom" Finnegan and his customs squad to the steamship President Adams at the Army Base. The liner is completing her 11th round the world voyage.

Since "nobody owned it," the contraband was seized and no arrests made.

A complete "dream layout," opium pipes and cookers, was also added to the government seizures, together with a small quantity of opium, when the squad returned from the British steamship Teucer at the Army Base. Again the officers and crew were surprised that such unlawful equipment should be on board.

ASKS HARVARD LINDY DEGREE

Mayor Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn has written Governor Fuller suggesting that he urge President Lowell and the board of overseers of Harvard to grant an honorary degree of doctor of aeronautical science to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh in recognition of the daring airman's intrepid exploit.

"It would be a great thing for Harvard and it would assure Lindy's coming to Boston," declared Mayor Bauer. "The degree, coming from an institution which has been building men for over 200 years, would be worth more than all the decorations and adulation of foreign politicians and nations."

Should Lindbergh really come to Boston, Mayor Bauer will invite him to visit Lynn as its guest and to dedicate a new flying field named in the famous sky pilot's honor.

F. C. CRANS

When Sears, Roebuck & Co. open their New England branch at Nos. 790-792 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, Mr. Crans will be in charge. The opening is slated for June 25.

SEARS ROEBUCK TO OPEN IN HUB

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the world's largest mail-order house, will open a retail branch store in Boston June 25.

The firm has secured quarters at Nos. 790 and 792 Commonwealth avenue and auto tires, auto accessories and camping equipment will be handled. F. C. Crans has been appointed manager of the New England branch and he is already in Boston supervising the unloading of stock and the other details in connection with the opening of the branch.

The Boston branch, in addition to the operation of the retail store, will handle all the mail order business from New England.

"We will handle tires, tubes and other automobile accessories and these can be readily ordered by mail by residents throughout New England," said Mr. Crans today.

CAPTAIN DOISY ESCAPES CRASH

Le Bourget, France, June 14 (A.P.)—Captain Georges Pelletier Doisy, noted French long-distance aviator, and his navigator, M. Gonin, narrowly escaped death today when their heavily loaded plane, hopping off on a flight to Karachi, India, crashed about two miles from here and was destroyed by fire.

Their try for a long-distance, non-stop record of 4,400 miles to Karachi was to have been preliminary to an attempt to fly the Atlantic from Paris to New York.

The plane, heavily loaded for the trip by which the airmen had hoped to break the record set up by Clarence D. Chamberlin on his New York to Germany flight in the Bellanca plane Columbia, was unable to get much altitude after it had taken off and nosed downward a few minutes after leaving Le Bourget.

FIREMEN DON MASKS TO FIGHT AMMONIA FUMES

A score of Boston firemen today donned gas masks when they entered the basement of the Morris drug store at No. 291 Huntington avenue, after one of the pipes in the ammonia refrigerating plant burst. The drug store is across the street from the New England Conservatory of Music and is only a short distance from the Northeastern University. More than a thousand students from the two institutions watched the firemen as they entered the fume-filled building and turned off the flow of ammonia.

LETTER LIKE A DAISY TO RUTH

CHAPTER 19.

By RUTH BROWN SNYDER.

Copyright, 1927, King Features Synd., Inc.

OUT of the mines and mazes of thousands of letters sent me here comes one like a daisy growing in a muck-heap.

It is from my cousin, Thora. I always loved Thora. And what she thought and still thinks of me her own words can say far better than any of mine.

The letter is personal, and in publishing it here I have only one purpose—I ask you to bear in mind as you read its plain, homely phrases, that this is written to Ruth Snyder:

"My Dear Ruth:

"How often I have wanted to write to you Ruth dear! And yet I feel that I can't write the kind of a letter that you need. I can tell you of my sympathy and of my hopes, but does that do you any good? Oh, no, I know Ruth that it doesn't help you any. I know so very little outside of what the papers tell me. You have no friends, they say, save your mother. How I wish I could be a friend to you. You know what I mean—a friend that could help you, that could do something to make you happy again!

SHOWED GOOD HEART.

"Do you know I love to think of the many times when you showed your good heart? I know there was much good in you, although you have been blackened.

"I wanted so much to have seen you. I called up your mother and asked her about it. She said I wouldn't be allowed to, so I didn't try.

"I was out to see your mother last Wednesday evening. Lorraine had gone to bed, and she came down just for a few minutes. She is so sweet. Andrew and Margaret were there, too. It's the first time I have seen them since I came back to New York. They look just as they did all those years ago. Margaret even looks younger, I think.

"Your mother has kept up wonderfully through all this, I think. She let me read some of your letters. I felt like crying when I held those sheets of paper in my hand, that you had written only a few days before.

"I have fixed over for Esther lots of those things you gave me of Lorraine's. I am so thankful for it all. It helps me a lot, you know. Little did we know, the day you brought those things to me, what was going to happen.

WISHES FOR BEST.

"I wonder if you may write to me! I should like to hear from you. But if you can't do it, it's all right, I'll see your mother once in a while, and she will tell me about you.

"Well, I must close now, Ruth. I wish the very best for you, of everything, and I hope and pray that it all will turn out in your favor.

"With much love,

"Your cousin,

"THORA."

That letter was written by one who knew me intimately all my life. By one who has undoubtedly felt keen disgrace of the blood kinship with the notorious Ruth. She doesn't speak of that, dear Thora. She only tells me of how my misfortunes and dangers hurt her—not mentioning that, as I imagine, wherever she goes and whomever she meets, she is constantly a butt—the cousin of "that woman."

She never dreamt, of course, that her honest, plain-spoken and pathetically fine letter would be read by outsiders. So you may believe it is quite sincere and unaffected.

Why cannot more people on this hard earth be Thora?

What does it harm anyone? "You have no friends, they say, save your mother!"

Isn't that a line for you? Could a Shakespeare have crowded more into twice as much space?

COOLIDGE READY TO FOLLOW WHERE LINDY LEADS WAY

FLIER'S PLEA FOR AIRPORTS IMPRESSES GOVERNMENT

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.
Editor of Universal Service

Washington, June 14.—Even in the midst of the overwhelming welcome which he and his mother are receiving at the hands of the people of New York it may interest Colonel Lindbergh and his admirers to know the impression which he has made upon the officials of his home government after a two-day visit in the Federal city.

From President Coolidge down, the officials of the government will tell you that next to his natural modesty and quiet courage, the trait in Colonel Lindbergh's character which most impressed his hosts of the last few days is his astounding common sense.

This was manifested in every decision that he made regarding his present and his future. You may be able to tire him out but you can not fluster him. He seems to know just when to take advice and when not fluster him. He seems to know what he ought to decide and what he ought to leave to future consideration. He had already commanded the admiration of the home government for what he is and what he had done before he arrived.

BELIEVE IN HIM.

But after their two-day association with him the President and the cabinet and the officials of the several departments directly interested in the development of aviation took repose such complete confidence in the judgment of this young man that they have already adopted his chief recommendation regarding the next step that should be taken to put American aviation where Colonel Lindbergh would have it put— second to none in the world.

As soon as Colonel Lindbergh announced here that what America needs aeronautically more than anything else is the establishment of a complete system of airports President Coolidge set his administration to work to find ways and means this Summer of helping cities and towns and States wishing to make their contributions to the establishment of such a system.

As a result of Colonel Lindbergh's visit here it is safe to say that by the time Congress comes into session the Federal government will have added to the development or at least twice as many real airports as now exist.

FEW MODERN AIRPORTS.

This is the first practical result of Colonel Lindbergh's home-coming. The fact that New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and even Washington are without really modern airports, and that many other cities are in the same predicament, is sure to focus public opinion upon the necessity of compelling Federal, State and municipal authorities to show their appreciation of Colonel Lindbergh's heroic adventure not only by what they say about him but by what they do for his cause—the cause of aviation.

If he finds the opportunity to do so Colonel Lindbergh has been assured that he will be a most welcome visitor this Summer at the Summer White House in the Black Hills of South Dakota. But the understanding here is that he has made no definite plans beyond his arrival in St. Louis.

WILL FINISH BOOK.

From there he will probably go into retirement long enough to finish his book and then will resume his work for the cause of which today he is the most powerful champion under his flag—the development of aviation among his own people.

Never before in the memory of men now living has the President of the United States entertained a guest who so quickly commanded not only the admiration of all who saw him for his modesty and his courage, but the complete confidence of all who talked with him, in his common sense.

Colonel Lindbergh's conquest of the Federal city is complete. There are no reservations to it. In asking the Federal government to cease to follow where Lindbergh leads the way.

Lindbergh Dodges Luncheon to Fly 15 Minutes

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Eluding newspapermen for the second time today, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh dashed to Curtiss Field this afternoon and flew for fifteen minutes in a Curtiss Oriole plane.

"That's what I call having a good time,' he was quoted as saying later.

He was to have attended a luncheon at the New York Newspaper Club, but sent his apologies and his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, went instead. She was given a huge bunch of American Beauty roses.

Houghton, at New Bedford, Exalts Lindy as U. S. Idol

New Bedford, June 14 (A.P.).—Alonzo B. Houghton, ambassador to the Court of St. James, arrived at Salters' Point this morning to spend a few days with his brother, Arthur Amory Houghton, and Mrs. Houghton, at their estate, The Meadows.

In a brief reference to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who was the guest of Ambassador and Mrs. Houghton at the American embassy in London during his visit to England, the ambassador said:

"He is a very remarkable boy. Amid all the excitement and noise he has kept himself perfectly calm and well poised. He represents, it seems to me, the very best in American youth, sane, clear-eyed courageous, animated by a very distinctly winning smile and address. All in all, I think Lindbergh is a boy of whom every American man and woman may be proud. This venturesome flight of his has done more to promote international good will and understanding than any single event I can recall since the war."

Houghton will return to London to be at the embassy for the celebration of Independence Day.

Like That Big Day? Lindy's Ma Sure Did!

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, mother of the Viking of the Air, held the fort against a dozen reporters again today.

Coming into the dining room of the Frazee apartment she smiled pleasantly at the gathering and then took a seat at the head of the table on which were several vases of bachelor buttons and pink carnations.

She wore a green crepe dress. Seated by a good night's sleep, she faced her questioners confidently. Lindbergh, standing by the sideboard, watched her closely.

LIKED THE ORATION.

Asked about her plans, she reminded the reporters that "We know nothing about the future."

"My son's flight has nothing to do with me," she added. "That's all his own affair."

"How did you like yesterday's reception?"

"How could I help liking it?" she said, smiling.

"It was a remarkable demonstration. The people here seemed gladder, happier than those in Washington. More boisterous, too."

Lindbergh cut in with:

"Oh, no; the volume was greater, but not the sentiment. That was 100 per cent. everywhere."

"Of course," agreed his mother. "But here in New York the people just seemed to enjoy it more. In Washington it was more solemn."

GOING BACK TO TEACH.

The date for Mrs. Lindbergh's return to Detroit has not been set, but she will go back to her classroom in Cass Technical High School.

"You'll keep your contract?" asked a reporter, adding, hastily, "but I guess that goes without saying."

"One keeps one's word," was the reply.

SEEKS MONEY TO ENFORCE "UNWANTED" DRY LAWS

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14 (A.P.).—Declaring that he had been asked "to enforce a law which people have shown they do not want," Judge Roscoe C. Harper, prohibition administrator for northern New York, announced today that he had written to Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews for more money to carry on his work in the face of strong opposition.

plans concerning the other half of his famous partnership.

He then said he was contemplating a tour of the country in the interest of aeronautics, but hastened to add that this, too, was indefinite.

His only reference to his epoch-making trip was in response to a question as to what had ailed his plane yesterday that prevented him from taking it to New York.

"It was just a matter of the salt spray blowing into the motor," he said. "You see the salt hardened when the engine warmed and the valves tightened. But it's fixed now."

ONE AUTOGRAPH

As the interview drew to a close, one reporter requested an autograph for his young son. Lindbergh showed just a trifle of impatience, as if to say: "What, another of those people?"

He said he was afraid that if he "started it" he'd have to sign his name for each one of the dozen press representatives present.

"Go ahead, Colonel, I'll pass," said one. "So will I," another assured him, and then there was a chorus of "and I!"

"All right," grinned Lindbergh, "I'll do it," and taking the reporter's fountain pen he wrote "Charles A. Lindbergh" on a card.

As the interviewers departed the 25 year-old hero assured them:

"If there's anything I can do for you at any time I'll be glad to do it."

On the way down in the elevator from the eleventh floor of the big apartment house one veteran reporter remarked to his colleagues:

"Say, that kid knows his onions." Everybody agreed with him.

Visits Long Island Flying Fields; Praises Workers

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Charles A. Lindbergh made a flying trip—by automobile—to Roosevelt, Mitchel and Curtiss Flying Fields on Long Island early today to pay an informal call on his friends, the pilots, mechanics and officers, who helped in his preparations for his New York to Paris hop.

Slipping out of the Park avenue apartment, where he and his mother had spent the night, Lindbergh got away about 7 o'clock, before the first newspaper reporters had arrived. He rods in the car of "Casey" Jones, Curtiss test pilot, and "Casey" himself was at the wheel.

A hard rain, which later necessitated abandonment of the school children's welcome celebration scheduled for Central Park this afternoon, did not prevent Lindbergh from carrying out his wish to thank "the fellows" of the airfields for their courtesies, not only at the time of his take-off for Paris, but on his arrival at Mitchel Field from Washington yesterday.

He paid his respects to Major Davidson, in charge of operations at Mitchel Field, and then, as "just another pilot," he chatted with members of the operating force, all of whom hurried to shake his hand.

One of his acts was to autograph the funnel through which had been poured the gasoline that carried the "Spirit of St. Louis" across the Atlantic.

Leaving Mitchel Field he drove to Curtiss Field, close by, where he renewed acquaintances with his buddies of less than a month ago, and then returned to his apartment.

The trip to the aviation grounds occupied about three hours of Lindbergh's time.

BANQUET TONIGHT

The program for the remainder of the day, in view of the cancellation of the Central Park celebration, was indefinite, but it was expected that he and his mother might take a short automobile ride in the afternoon, after luncheon at the Newspaper Club, coming back to their temporary home in time to prepare for the dinner which is to be given Lindbergh by the city of New York at the Commodore Hotel tonight, with 2,500 guests in attendance.

Whether Lindbergh will fly his own plane back to St. Louis from Washington or Mitchel Field at the conclusion of the New York celebration was still undetermined today.

If he decides to hop off from Washington, where "The Spirit of St. Louis" still awaits him, he will go to the capital by train from this city, probably Friday morning.

Receiving newspaper reporters in his temporary Park avenue home today, Lindbergh said that no decision had been made regarding the return trip, but that a choice between the two points of departure would be made later.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Smart Set Out Early to Witness the "Schooling" of the Horses on the Clyde Park Course

SOCIETY TOOK ITS MORNING coffee very early yesterday, particularly the coterie that dotes on fine horseflesh and is passionately addicted to races and riding, so that it might make an early arrival at the Country Club (very soon after the sun climbed over the tree-tops, in fact) to witness the schooling of the racers for tomorrow and Friday's big race events. "Schooling" as the local fashionables do it might be a Race Day itself, in miniature, so smart is the crowd and so breathless the interest, as sleek and shining horses do the flat or negotiate hurdles like so many birds.

EARLY HOURS CANNOT daunt the horsey set. Witness the Autumn mornings when they gather for the hunt meets just after dawn, come rain or shine. Yesterday's sun and sky were fairest of the fair, and practically "everyone" was on hand when Old Sol showed his shining face over the tree tops. John R. Macomber and Bayard Tuckerman and Augustus F. Goodwin, the big three of the meet, were busy as could be with the multifarious details of the approaching races. And Bayard Tuckerman was, of course, "up" frequently.

"PETE" SORTWELL (WITHout whom no race meet gets on) was on hand. And so was Sumner Pingree, vastly interested with Mrs. Pingree in the Pingree horses. The former Miss Mary Weld is going in strongly for steeplechasers and racers, and has a duo entered. Wrackeen is one and Carlino another. Wherever one sees Mrs. Pingree there sure to be also is her friend, Miss Ella deT. Snelling. Miss Snelling, smart in white, was keenest of the keen for the splendid horses. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Prince were on hand, Mr. Prince in riding kit as one of the gentlemen jockeys that make the races so very interesting to the Smart Set.

MRS. BAYARD TUCKERMAN was never far from the jumps, and, of course, the picture was not complete without Mrs. Alvin Sortwell, attractive helpmate of the popular "Pete," with a small Sortwell daughter or two attractive youngsters in bright Brittany blue hats and frocks. Mrs. Oliver Wolcott, and the George Saltonstall Wents, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Conway Felton, Miss Sylvia Warren and J. Austin Amory, all representative of the horsey set, came out for the spectacle.

MISS MARY LOUISE ALMY was in riding kit. So were those two energetic young girls so perfectly at home in the saddle—the Misses Ruth and Dorothy Neyhart. Miss Peggy Porter, on the other hand, and Miss Beatrice Howell, as well, were in smart sports attire. Miss Mary Frances Oakes came over to the course from her nearby home, "Southwood," in the lovely section about the Country Club. Mrs. Richard Middlecott Saltonstall was on hand, and so were both her sons, Richard and Leverett. Henry G. Vaughan, M. F. H. of Norfolk Hunt, came down, and so did B. Nason Hamlin.

INVETERATE FOLLOWERS OF shows and meets, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Almy, moved about from vantage point to vantage point, as the horses dashed about the dirt course, or went over the jumps of the steeplechase. Mrs. Almy's sapling slenderness is seen to vast advantage in riding kit, or as yesterday, when she was in a trim tailleur of tobacco brown and snug felt hat. Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons was interested primarily in her horse, Castle Hill, whose rider will wear her colors of blue and gold on Wednesday, and again at Racelands on Saturday.

NATURALLY THE PRESENCE of the colt Gun Boat, son of the famous Man o' War, was sufficient in itself to thrill the spectators. Gun Boat's name might well be Destroyer, so sleek and fleet is he. Having just won the Woodbine he is famous on his own account. Then there is Rook of Cashel, Bayard Tuckerman's favorite, and Mr. Macomber's Bashdon and Pete the Scribe out of a fine string. Oh, certainly there's enough and to spare of the horseflesh stabled at Brookline to give everyone a treat, be he connoisseur or merely delighting in the Races for the thrill of the thing.

Betty Alden

WRITE NOW ON ROUGH RIDERS HISTORY

"Rough Rider" writers, you're on the home stretch!

It's time to wake up now, those of you who haven't really gotten into this contest as you should.

Think of it—$500 cash awards—almost for the asking.

You don't have to be a literary genius, nor have an encyclopaedia of data on the Rough Riders. You don't have to be long-winded either. A ten-word letter may win the prize as well as one that goes to the 500-word limit.

But get into it!

The only thing required to be eligible for the contest is that you live in New England. The only thing you have to do is write a letter on your own ideas and conceptions of the story of the Rough Riders.

Write that letter now, and mail it to the Rough Rider Editor.

Make it interesting. Keep it short. But start now.

The Rough Rider contest will close at the end of the week, and the judges will announce the winners immediately afterwards. There won't be any long-dragged-out process to it.

Prizes are $250 for the winning letter, $100 for the next best, five titled prize, $25 each for the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh place letters.

Ready? Let's go!

MADGE BELLAMY AND MOTHER IN LIQUOR PROBE

Los Angeles, June 14 (A.P.)—The names of Madge Bellamy, motion picture star, and her mother, Mrs. Anne Philpot, were linked with a Federal investigation of an alleged liquor smuggling conspiracy here today as Assistant United States District Attorney George Channesian gathered evidence which he expects to lay before a grand jury tomorrow.

Channesian announced that the screen actress and her mother had been asked to appear before him to answer questions regarding their knowledge of treatment and liberties given federal prisoners in the Orange County Jail during the past year, when the smuggling conspiracy is alleged to have been in full swing.

Mrs. Philpot was said to have made several visits to a man in the jail who was serving a sentence for liquor law violations.

An attorney appeared for Miss Bellamy and her mother, saying the actress was busy on location. No date was set for the appearance of the two women and it was announced that the time for questioning would be fixed to suit the actress' convenience.

A chief deputy sheriff of Orange County, which adjoins Los Angeles County, a justice of the peace and three others have been arrested with the investigation.

LEVINE AVERTS SEIZURE OF OCEAN PLANE

Berlin, June 14 (A.P.).—A conference today between the legal representatives of Charles A. Levine and Dr. Puppe, German financial promoter, brought a satisfactory provisional compromise definitely removing the possibility of attachment of the transatlantic monoplane Columbia.

Dr. Puppe had threatened attachment if a sum the amount of which was not made public, were not paid him for work which he claimed to have done in promoting negotiations for a loan on behalf of Levine with various steel mills in Germany two years ago.

Under the terms suggested by the lawyers, both parties will make apologies and Levine will pay a sum to Dr. Puppe.

New York, June 14 (A.P.)—Although she has never flown in an airplane, Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin, here on her way to Europe to meet her son, Clarence D. Chamberlin, pilot of the Bellanca plane on his non-stop flight to Germany, would fly back to America with him if he asked her.

The white-haired mother of the flier, accompanied by her six-year-old grandson, Bobbie Moffett, plans to sail tonight on the United States liner George Washington. She will go to Wembley, near London, to visit her sister, and hopes the aviator will fly there to see them.

She said her trip had no connection with her son's flight, explaining she had planned it for a year and expects to remain in Wembley three months.

"I am hastening my visit in the hope that my son will join me in England, but I am not planning to accompany him on his travels on the continent," she said. "I'll be home with him!" she repeated. "Surely, if he asks me."

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the correct bidding and play of this hand. Those who have been following the hands published in this paper will be able to go through the play of the hand without difficulty.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

On the opening bid of one heart by South, North should have raised to two hearts. Instead he bid two clubs, which is a forcing bid. When South rebid two hearts, North should have gone at No Trump. Such a bid would have shown a balanced hand with a strong stopper in the enemy suit. When South rebid two hearts, North should have gone at No Trump. Such a bid would have shown a balanced hand with a strong stopper in the enemy suit.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2 and 3. If Declarer leads a diamond at trick 2 and East plays the ace, Declarer can lead a spade to the queen and then lead a diamond, forcing out the ace. Then Declarer can lead a spade to the queen and then lead a diamond, forcing out the ace.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

URGE N. E. AVIATION BOOM

FORGE INTO LEAD, SAYS LAWRENCE

Rye Beach, N. H., June 14.—Taking a lesson from Lindbergh and Chamberlin, New England must seize every opportunity to get into the forefront of aviation development, members of the New England Council were told today by John S. Lawrence, president, at their quarterly meeting here.

Now is not the time for sitting back and resting on our laurels, but rather a time to strive and strive and strive to keep our place at the head of the procession, we shall not be able to maintain our present position in a development of such importance unless we continue to take advantage of the natural [illegible]

London, June 14 (INS)—A tax on lipsticks to pay England's war debt to the United States is suggested in all seriousness by the Vicar of Kingston Hill, Surrey.

Writing in his parish magazine under the heading "Stamp Duties and Vamp Beauties," the vicar asks "Why does not Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Churchill tax lipsticks and face cream?

The Last Days of Pompeii — By Bulwer-Lytton

GLAUCUS, the Athenian, learned that the owners of Nydia, the blind slave girl mistreated her. He bought her to save her from suffering, and Nydia fell in love with him. But he was so filled with his love for Ione, the beautiful Grecian girl, that he did not notice Nydia. One day he sent her with a letter to Ione.

GLAUCUS pleaded in his letter for a chance to see Ione, and she agreed. After that came a time of happiness for the lovers, and of bitter jealousy for Nydia. They were both fond of her, and they insisted on taking her on their pleasure trips, not realizing that their endearments hurt the pretty little blind girl terribly.

ARBACES, the lawless, pleasure-loving Egyptian, and the guardian of Ione, determined to win her from Glaucus by force. She came to his house for dinner, but Nydia, realizing her danger, notified Ione's brother, Apaecides, a priest of Isis. Enraged, the brother hurried to the rescue, meeting Glaucus on the way.

THE two young men with Arbaces in a small [illegible] She had fainted. The Egyptian was powerful. He turned on Glaucus and Apaecides, and had almost overpowering them when an earthquake shook the temple. A bust of the goddess Isis fell, knocking him senseless.

Malcewicz Poison to Sure Thing Gang

By Jack Conway

"I AM going to tell a couple of stories which didn't come out at that boxing and wrestling hearing at Chicago, and which prove that Joe Malcewicz of Utica, N. Y., a doughboy in the real fight over there a few years ago, is the world's heavyweight wrestling champion," said Mr. Boston with much earnestness.

"I have always admired Malcewicz," went on the veteran. "Maybe this is because he wasn't afraid to get in the way of hot lead in the great adventure. He also won the championship of the A. E. F. at wrestling which was quite a feat. Nobody could put any of those soldier boys in the satchel.

"But I'm not getting down to my first story. A year ago last March, Paul Bowser signed Joe Stecher, who at the time claimed the world's heavyweight title, for a bout at the New Boston Arena. Joe insisted on meeting an unknown wrestler. That is the wrestler was to be an unknown before the bout to everybody but Joe. It seems that the Scissors King was anxious to bring one of his little playmates to the Hub and toss him at will.

"Bowser consented to the plan of allowing Stecher to meet an unknown, but innocently asked that a clause be inserted in the contract permitting him to name Stecher's opponent. Joe agreed to this after he thought he had Bowser sold on the idea of using a certain young man from Chicago.

"On the night of the contest, Stecher entered the ring very bravely. Seated in the other corner was his hand picked unknown from Chicago. Chief Mentour. At the time an ally of Bowser's, asked the Chicago unknown to leave the corner, on the pretence a photographer wished to take a picture of Stecher in the ring alone.

Mr. Boston

"THE announcer then stepped to the centre of the ring and in a clear voice said:

"'I want to introduce Paul Bowser's unknown and the opponent for Stecher in tonight's bout, Joe Malcewicz of Utica, N. Y.'

"Malcewicz, who had been hidden away in a press row, hopped into the ring. Stecher turned white and ran out of the ring to his dressing room. The referee then proclaimed Malcewicz the winner by default.

"That, buddy, is one reason why I consider Malcewicz the world's champion. He also proved that night that he wrestles for all he is worth regardless of whether Joe Stecher or Kid Paolooka is his opponent. I guess Stecher knew this also judging by the way he beat it from the ring.

"NOW for my second story. Malcewicz was wrestling Strangler Lewis at Tulsa, Okla. Lewis, of course, feared that Malcewicz would take sausage meat out of him. And he wouldn't sign for the tussle until he was given the privilege of naming the referee. This bout proved how important it is to control the referee in a wrestling match.

"Malcewicz went after Lewis from the gong and soon scored with the first fall. When the bout was resumed, he started the Strangler on the run.

"During a mixup, Lewis was cute enough to get close to the ropes, and when Malcewicz picked him up he landed in the crowd. The Strangler, with his own referee on the job, declared he was unable to wrestle any more. He was then declared the winner on a foul.

"THAT is reason No. 2 why I consider Malcewicz the world's best wrestler.

"They say that Alexander Garkawienko, whom Malcewicz meets at the Arena on Thursday night, is the best of the big fellows. Before I let out this opinion I'll have to be shown. Garkawienko may be another Lockenschmidt and all that, but I have an idea that a boy who could see shelf fire and keep right on smiling hasn't got anything to fear from any of the so-called leading mat men."

Highlights on Big Match

Oakmont Country Club, June 14.—Although Clarence Wolf rom the Sunset Hill Country Club of St. Louis played with Harry Cooper during the first round, he was unable to get his shots to roll off his clubs properly. While Cooper was negotiating Oakmont in 74, the St. Louis amateur was struggling to get an 89

Old Tod Ray fooled all the "Doubting Thomasses" when he turned in 39, which put him on even terms with Bobby Jones. In his usual consistent form, the British veteran was a such way.

Jim Barnes, the elongated professional from New Rochelle and former United States title holder, staged a fine comeback when he returned in 36 after taking a 42 for the outward round.

Bobby Jones was at the top of his putting game during the first eighteen holes, which brought him to the turn in 37 but the putter got cold on the return trip and Bobby managed to break 40 by a single stroke. Bobby is in an ideal position for the second round tomorrow or he never wanted to be the pace maker.

Big Fred Robeson, who played with the British Ryder cup team, was the first star to withdraw from the championship. Robeson put in a terrible morning. He used up 46 valuable strokes getting to the turn and after coming up with a six on the ghost hole, announced that he had had sufficient.

Jack Forrester, who is the professional at the Baltusrol Country Club, he scene of the national amateur championships last year, put together a pair of 40s for an 80. Jack Forrester is still in the running and has a fine chance of being in the light on Thursday.

Aubrey Boomer and George Duncan, the British stars, finished in the 80s. Boomer was out in 38, but is encountered considerable trouble coming home and took a 45 for an 83, while Duncan was 43 at the turn and only managed to clip off two strokes coming in and has an 84.

After racing to the turn in 37 strokes, Harry Cooper, the hope of the Pacific coast, came up with two 4s on the way home. In spite of the 16th and 17th holes, Cooper came through with a 39 for the last nine, a deuce on the 13th saving the bacon.

Before he left Los Angeles for Oakmont, Harry Cooper promised that if he did not finish in the first five he would walk home. He is on his way to return first class, for he got off to a fine start. In the first round he had a 74

Dave Sutherland, who was the professional at the Fall River Country Club last season, and after qualifying for the open at Ewex did not play, came through with a 78 this morning Sutherland had plenty of trouble going out, but he stayed with it and returned in 37. Dave is connected with the Glendale Country Club of St. Louis.

Arthur Havers, the clever British player, is in the honor class for the opening day. Like Sutherland, Havers used up 41 strokes to the turn but was only two over 4s for the remainder of the journey.

Jack Curley, who is the professional at the Marlboro Country Club, had a tough time today. He came up with a 91 and is already out of the running. At Lido, two years ago, during the qualifying rounds Curley startled the golf world by staying right up with the top notchers.

Our old friend Mike Brady was in the 70s. Mike was very much upset when he was not selected for the Ryder cup team and his showing at the open today is doubly sweet to the former Oakley professional.

As Charlie Whitcombe finished with an 84, Ted Ray and Archie Compston, who were not even extended a mere mention of being in the running, are the only Englishmen in the 70s. Robson is out, while Duncan, Boomer, Jolly and Whitcombe were in the early 80s.

Former Champ Declares He Will Be In Top Form When He Meets Local Contender

By MARK KELLY

Los Angeles, June 14.—After frantic hours of telephonic negotiations between Jack Dempsey in behalf of Jack Dempsey, Johnny Buckley in behalf of Jack Sharkey on this end and Tex Rickard, batting for himself, on the New York end, a match between Dempsey and Sharkey was practically clinched here.

Rickard and Buckley want the fight for July 21 Dempsey is out for August 3 as the date and after a conference at the Ambassador Hotel both Dempsey an Buckley announced that Rickard was no man to get the bout if any other Eastern promoter came through with a better offer.

"I AM READY."—DEMPSEY.

"I am ready for the test," Dempsey told Buckley. "When I talked to Rickard on Saturday I told him test July 21 would be Okay for me but since then I've decided to ask two weeks more for training so I'm sure there will be no possibility of my not being in the very best of condition."

Buckley, it is understood, is in no way pledged to Rickard and is not averse to taking the fight elsewhere. Sharkey wants the fight to be a 10-round affair, so New York is about a cinch to get it.

"I am convinced that Dempsey is sincere," said Buckley. "We had quite a talk and he looked to me to be in splendid physical shape, said his mind was at rest, and that while he preferred to fight for Rickard he would consider any other bona fide offer. We didn't talk terms. But he knows that I will demand just as much as he does for the fight. I will insist on not less than 30 per cent. for our end of the fight. I believe Sharkey will stop Dempsey inside of five rounds."

The Yankee stadium, where the fight will undoubtedly be pulled if Rickard gets it, can gross $1,200,000. Thirty per cent. to each of the fighters means $360,000 in case of capacity.

RACE ADDED TO CLYDE PARK CARD

Number of Entries Cause Officials to Split 'Myopia' in Two Divisions

Entries for the Country Club race meeting tomorrow and Friday are so many that officials of the Eastern Horse Club have been forced to add a race to the first day's program.

The Myopia, a sweepstakes sprint for three-year-olds and upwards, will be run in two divisions. The first division will be run as the third race, an entirely new addition, and the second division as the seventh race.

That means that the ten starters will run three instead of two flat races and four steeplechases on the first day of the 37th race meeting.

Thirty-three entries for the Myopia were received, but the officials didn't expect more than a dozen horses on hand to start, due to the thoroughbreds reported for schooling. It was found that 15 of the original 33 entries were ready and anxious to start, so an $800 purse was put up and the extra race added.

Large fields are also entered in the steeplechase races but no "dark horse will be necessary in these events.

Ray Coombs Wins Wingate Trophy

Exeter, N. H., June 14.—Captain Raymond F. Coombs of Kennebunk, Me., pitcher and left fielder of the Exeter nine and a nephew of Jack Coombs, famous big league pitcher of other years, has won the Wingate memorial trophy for the second successive year.

This trophy was given by Charles F. L. Wingate of Winchester, Mass., in memory of his son, Davis F. Wingate, captain on the Exeter 1910 nine and Harvard captain in 1914. The award is made on the merits of a player scoring runs, reaching first base, stolen bases and sacrifice hits and fielding. Coombs had a total of 44 points to 45 for his nearest teammate, Frederick I. Dawson, Saxonville.

DeForrest Had Narrow Escape

New York, June 14.—Jimmy DeForrest, who has been missing from a fat bonnie for the past three weeks, was discovered today in a sick bed at his Long Branch, N. J., training camp.

He climbed 30 feet up a ladder to fix it, lost his footing and fell. He suffered a severe concussion, a fractured ankle and various other injuries.

ANOTHER ELI OARSMAN IS ILL

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 14 (A.P.)—J. D. Warren, at No. 5 in the Yale varsity crew, developed a head cold today and Head Coach Ed Leader decided that as the weather had turned chilly it was advisable to send the crew out for morning practice.

Quarrier at No. 6, who was out of the boat yesterday because of a cold, was better today but it was not thought wise to have him exposed to the rain.

It is thought Warren will be out of the boat for two days. No time trial of the varsity crew can be made before Saturday unless the two men get back into form quickly and this will deprive the crew of one four-mile trial which had been planned.

Coach Leader took out the second varsity crew for a two-mile paddle upstream, and Don Grant followed with the combination crew and Murphy with the freshmen for similar practice.

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 14.—F. Valentine Chappel, chairman of the Yale-Harvard regatta committee announced today that the Chamber of Commerce has ordered the suspension of navigation on the Thames River above the railroad bridge on the day of the race, subject to the regulation of the Coast Guard.

The Coast Guard will direct traffic until one hour before the race and will reopen the river half an hour after the event.

Chappel has received word that the presidential yacht Mayflower will go to New London for the races, though it is not known yet who will be aboard. Governor Fuller will watch the rowing classic from a Coast Guard boat anchored at the end of the course.

Outsiders will often ask you, as a Chelmsford Society member, certain questions about Chelmsford Ginger Ale. That you may have accurate information with which to reply, we are giving several of the more common questions and their answers.

Question.
Why are so many people so keen for Chelmsford?

Answer
Ah... that's one of the real secrets of the Chelmsford Society. Some members swear it is the zing of Chelmsford's real fruit juices. Others aver it is rather the zest of spicy ginger. Others hold it is the secret of a marvelous blend. Perhaps it is due to all these excellences. Why don't you try it for yourself?

Question.
Is Chelmsford obtainable in Pale Dry as well as the regular or golden?

Answer
Why yes indeed. Chelmsford bottles both types.

Question.
Where can I get Chelmsford?

Answer
Ask that question at every obliging grocer, ask it at every drug store and at the soft drink stands, as well as the good hotels.

"Jack Sharkey is the man I'm to meet in defense of my title in September, then I know that I'm faced by one of the toughest battles of my ring lifetime.

The first time I saw him in action was the night he made a punching bag of Jim Maloney. I went there, as did thousands of others, figuring that if Sharkey won it would be via the decision route.

For I believed what I had heard about him—and I had heard that he was a relic of a bitter

Some folks explain the terrific punch he displayed that night by saying that Maloney's nose was shattered before he went into the ring and that he was a setup for the first good punch that landed. Sharkey without a doubt has a terrific punch.

SHARKEY CAN HIT.

That, in a way, is true. But I met Maloney in the ring and I can say that Sharkey can hit. Maloney took a punch on the nose that would have stopped a mule, but that doesn't account for the terrific punch that Sharkey showed.

Once upon a time I pitted Maloney [illegible] and I know. But Maloney took it in stride.

But all in all, I'm not worried about my ability to defend my title successfully against Sharkey. I outboxed Maloney at long range. And when I was in close, Maloney couldn't hurt me. He wasn't able to [illegible] when I was at close quarters. He couldn't even [illegible] when I was in close.

Perhaps Sharkey has improved a lot since I met him. I've heard that he has. But I'm willing to bet that the difference between the two will be great that Sharkey abandoned his consistent line of boxer and went in to slug.

And when he did he proved that he can hit with a terrific punch.

JACK A MASTER.

If Sharkey were only a hitter, then he would not be up as so dangerous.

But here's a man that knows about every trick in the boxing trade; a fast man, a sure and accurate hitter, a man who is a great ring general, and who, above all else, has perfect confidence in himself. There isn't much—if anything—that he lacks.

And if he is the man I'm to fight in September—and it's going to be quite an affair. For I am to be [illegible] to meet a [illegible] boxer as I've seen in many years—and I am no slouch in possession of a certain punch.

But I figure I will be the master of the fight if I can be able to [illegible] or a punching bag Sharkey.

He's been on the floor quite a few times; no one ever has dropped me.

That's one I feel I'll have the answer for and will carry me through to victory.

Canned Vegetables Save Time for Home Cook

By MARTHA LEE

NO longer is it necessary to chant peans of praise on the virtues of vegetables. Not one of us, I'm sure, fails to realize that vegetables in variety we must serve if our family is to receive its full daily duota of vital vitamines.

Even though you are not located where you can every day obtain a frequent supply of fresh vegetables at moderate prices you can really keep a Summer vegetable garden of canned products right on your kitchen shelves—nice grazing ground for the "cow in your pantry"—evaporated milk!

The old-time prejudice against canned goods was based on the erroneous idea that "freshness" meant uncanned and that those foods are freshest which are bought uncooked and uncanned on the open market.

But most of us have come to recognize the truth that the canner vegetables and fruits are eaten after they are picked at the height of their flavor and the taste when opened is just as delicious as when they are cooked and served in the home. Sometimes, even more delicious!

They are a real economy, too, inasmuch as canned vegetables and fruits are ready to serve. That means no bad parts to throw away, no paring or cutting to do, no waste of any kind. And the food is even more carefully selected, more uniform, more scientifically clean and pure and infinitely fresher than fresh fruits and vegetables which may have been a week or more traveling from the vines to you.

Today I've tried to find for you vegetable recipes that are easy to follow yet conservative of the busy housewife's time. You'll not find them expensive either for this time of year.

EARLY CABBAGE—Cut a fine white cabbage nearly through in quarters and cook, uncovered, until tender, in rapidly boiling water, to which a teaspoonful of salt has been added. Remove carefully, drain thoroughly and arrange in a round serving dish, white and shallow enough to allow the quarters to spread apart with spaces between each.

Put two alternate spaces with coldly seasoned hot peas, which may be fresh, cooked or canned, and the other two spaces with well-buttered new carrots dread the size of the peas. Pour in the middle a rather thick mock Hollandaise sauce and serve immediately very hot. To make the sauce, follow the general directions for making medium thick white sauce, using water instead of milk. Just before serving add to a pint of sauce, a tablespoonful or two of lemon juice and pour it over the beaten yolks of two eggs, continuing the beating.

TOMATO APPETIZERS—Peel six medium tomatoes, scoop out the middle, and fill them with equal parts of drained, crushed pineapple, celery and shredded cabbage mixed lightly with mayonnaise. Unmold with a bit of lettuce, catsup, a bit of mayonnaise on each. Serves six.

Corn Pudding—About a quarter cup of the pimento, celery or cabbage will be required. To this add a tablespoonful of the minced pepper and about two tablespoonfuls of the mayonnaise to which a teaspoonful of catchup has been added. Serve each on a bed of shredded lettuce or on a round of hot buttered toast.

LUNCHEON ASPARAGUS—Remove the tough part from a bunch of asparagus, wash thoroughly, and cook until tender in boiling salted water. Drain, lay on toast squares on a hot platter and surround with a ring of hot hard cooked eggs, quartered lengthwise. Dredge the eggs with paprika, sprinkle with parsley and pour over all as much melted butter as your conscience will allow, or mock Hollandaise sauce, if preferred.

NEW POTATOES JERSEY STYLE—Scrape small, new potatoes, cook till tender in boiling salted water and arrange closely in one layer in a shallow hot serving dish. Pour over them two or three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, dredge thickly with paprika, sprinkle with minced parsley and serve.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Household Hints

Mice will often prefer oats or biscuit to cheese, and if some scraps of bread and dripping are placed in the neighborhood of each trap they will be an additional lure.

When cleaning knives, add a little bicarbonate of soda to the cleaning powder. This helps to remove stains.

The quickest way to clean silver is to apply a little methylated spirit. When quite dry, polish with a soft rag.

Knife handles can be kept white if they are occasionally wiped with spirits of wine.

An egg slightly cracked can be boiled successfully if a teaspoonful of vinegar be added to the water.

To clean glassware wash in warm soapy water and use a brush for cut and ornamental parts. Add a few drops of vinegar to the rinsing water.

The Love Slave ~ The Clash ~ By Homer Banks

THE CLASH WITH CHANDLER—"Shall we tell him that Clifford is ill?" cried Corinne looked at her father, wrung grand in surprise. "Of course we mean it," she said. "It's wrong with the stage." Chandler looked at her keen his baffled brain cells. "What's wrong with it?" he retorted. "I'm a girl of your age, and—and—and I'm sorry!"

CORINNE'S RETORT—Corinne was the first to break the silence. "This is all so silly," she said. "Why, the idea of your attempting to criticize my life—you, who understand nothing of American girls and their battle to live their own lives." Chandler was silent for a second. Corinne continued: "It has always been my dream to be a great actress. Your own father was on the road to great success when he died. He must have told you my own dear mother's frustrated ambitions.

Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A CHALLENGE—Suddenly Chandler burst forth. "The idea of your even considering a career at your age!" he shouted. Corinne drew herself up proudly. "What do you know about life?" she challenged. "You who, with all your theories, have never come face to face with reality! You've been away from this country so long you don't understand American girls. We live!"

CHANDLER'S THREAT—A white fury had settled upon Chandler. "You—you—why, you ought to be ashamed," he retorted. It appeared to Corinne that he seemed a little helpless. His hand fumbled nervously with his tie, as he exclaimed defiantly: "I shall exercise my full rights as your guardian. I forbid you to continue with your so-called stage career. I'll give you one week to consider. After that, I'll take court action if necessary."

Tuberculosis Problem in England

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

IN Cantershire, Eng., is the Papworth Tuberculosis Colony and Village Settlement, started under the wise management of Dr. [illegible] Varrier.

This colony and village settlement is not ordinarily different in principle to many that have been developed and now exist in the United States. But it does cover certain features that cannot but be of both interest and importance to the friends of any tuberculosis relief work.

Papworth attempts to deal with the cases whom treatment in a sanatorium has not cured sufficiently to allow them to take up their old jobs. In actual fact, hardly any tuberculous patient has his disease arrested for good in a sanatorium. The process of recovery is a very long one. The malady fluctuates between temporary arrest and reappearance. A long period of sheltered life is consequently necessary before any patient can completely recover. That idea existed in the old system which aimed to build a bridge between pure treatment and a return to ordinary life, to give patients an opportunity to "harden off." The idea itself was sound, but the execution was faulty. Patients were given work and rightly, for creative effort and restored usefulness are of profound importance in their treatment. But the work was only of some kind; light open-air farm work. It was monotonous. Patients naturally got tired of it and left it too early, relapsing soon after they resumed their ordinary jobs. Many patients did not progress sufficiently in it. Farm work does not suit everyone and for some it is distinctly harmful.

The old system had no regard to the permanent employment of the consumptive but only to carry on sanatorium treatment in a less expensive and correspondingly more humorous way.

The village settlement, exemplified at Papworth, on the other hand is an attempt to employ consumptives as far as possible at their own trades under constant medical supervision. The village must provide round the sanatorium. Patients and their families, therefore, have the benefit of constant and skilled medical advice and workers are fitted to their work and the work modified to suit them. Many patients are quite able to earn their living at their propert vocations if the conditions are right.

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I love a young man dearly and he loves me. He has proved it by offering marriage.

He had quite an accident and is now in the hospital, but is doing finely and will soon return home.

Here is my problem. His folks are of different nations by and his mother doesn't speak good English to them. This used to make me [illegible] reason for never introducing me to him, but I worried whether he really cared for me. Now you see why I feel as though I just couldn't go over to his house to see him. Am I right, please—or even terrible—to let such a thing stand in the way at a time like this when he is ill?

JUST GRATEFUL.

SINCE your friend loves you and [illegible] to marry him you and he surely can talk this matter over freely. Why do you not ask him before he leaves the hospital whether you may call at his home to inquire for him until he is well or ask to be excused now? Tell him the fact that his mother does not speak English will make it easy less for you to visit him before he leaves the hospital.

SELF-WRINGING MOP

Their Mother's Theory is Correct

"Before I began using Bond Bread," writes Mrs. Helen M. O'Halloran of Watertown, "it was very hard to get my children to eat bread.

"Now they eat Bond Bread with all their meals and between times. I think it's the delicious flavor, and because it is so easily digested they like it so."

Mrs. O'Halloran's two children, Helen Louise and John, appear above.

Just 5 years ago, 6405 Boston housewives brought samples of their home-baked bread to Tremont Temple to show us the kind of bread they wanted for themselves and their children. Being frankly copied from the best of those 6405 loaves, Bond Bread quickly became Boston's most popular bread.

Why is it that after 8 years of unparalleled popularity, Bond Bread now enjoys an even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread, like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER 21

MARK could tell from the way Claire slipped the rings from her fingers that she was angry with him.

He had hurt her. This was the way she acted when she had a grievance.

When they were in their own room, Claire switched the taffeta spread, folded it deftly—interrupting—her eyes filing and shut quickly.

"You all but said you were tired of me—talking about that horrid book."

She cried readily, but he could never bear to see her tears. He went over and took the spread from her. "Don't be silly. What would a dinner party be without an argument? You shouldn't begrudge me a little fun when you force me to attend the weddings."

"You seemed to enjoy yourself. You wanted me to, didn't you? Isn't that why we went?

"You weren't required to dance four times in succession with the youngest girl in the party.

"I only danced . . . twice.'

"And flirting with her the way you did."

He sighed. "Dancing and flirting thirteen years, but I use to you yet."

She went over to the bureau, put her wrist watch in a small box. "Why do you always speak disparagingly of sacred things? Why need you have risked as though you were disappointed in me?"

Claire gave him a look of scarlet frustration, grabbed her kimono and went in a little wounded rush to her dressing room.

She would have a cry, carefully remove traces of tears, come back quietly. Why was she hurt? Because he no longer cherished starry illusions of their love? Was that his fault?

At exactly 4 o'clock—trembling—radiant, looking like a goddess, Roen went to Conrad's office.

Mark, advancing to meet her, pulling out a chair, thought with astonishment: "Surely not the woman who wants Mullins' boy!"

He had a different picture in his mind. A picture of a single woman who had missed romance and was now getting on in years; a lonely woman wanting a thing to love.

But here stood a vital, glowing creature. A girl. Perhaps twenty-eight—a rich, mature twenty-eight yet exuberantly young, entering the room like a flame. What would a girl this young—a girl with such a face—want with another woman's child?

He asked, puzzled: "But I wonder if you've fully considered the step? Of course, you have six months before the papers become final should you wish to change your mind."

"I won't wish to change. I don't want that six months. I'd like the papers made final now."

"Oh, the law requires the six months. But once you've finally accepted, you become responsible as a parent. No matter what might happen in the course of the next few years, you'd still be required to provide for this boy."

She looked beyond him, smiling happily: "Yes—I'll have him always—that's what I want."

He chanced to notice her hand as it rested on the desk. He had seen many hands far more beautiful. But this hand had a vitality of its own—a personality expressive and ardent like the husky sweetness of her voice.

He leaned forward and asked suddenly: "Why in the world are you adopting another woman's child?"

She was so startled that she answered hastily: "Oh, does it seem strange to you? This baby is almost like my own. I've had him nearly five months. Is it so peculiar that I wish to keep him?"

Smiling, she glanced for the first time directly in his face. And was conscious of an burned-ate turmoil. She thought: Michael's eyes—hazel instead of blue — the same look.

She wanted to turn from it. And could not. The same clear forehead, "Yes," he was saying. "It seems peculiar. For you will soon most likely marry. You may have children of your own. But once the papers are final, you will still have to keep it a boy."

"Marry—I? No! You don't understand. I shall never marry. I want the baby—I must have it."

She stood with her head raised—brave proud appealing. Suddenly she reached her hand to him in a pleading gesture. "Please, you will not oppose me?"

The smile on her face, which had paled, touched him piercingly. And her hand reached out in the wing gesture—meeting his.

He clasped it—a living, ardent warmth. "I shall not oppose it. Certainly not! I had to warn you of the life-long responsibility."

She moved to the door. Her eyes now smiled at him with a passionate radiance: "Then you'll fix it up! Right away. And there's no doubt that I may keep him?"

She was gone.

And then Claire came saying "You know the Martins are coming for dinner. I want to go home early to look over things."

She suddenly rested her hand in almost the exact spot where he had noticed Roen's. His experienced a shock. Claire's hand was so slender—so lifeless—white, smooth, inert.

She stood with her sweet, young mouth firmly set—a nervous pucker between her eyes—worrying lest the dinner be not right for the Martins.

Almost brusquely he cried: "Don't worry! What difference does it make if the Martins like their dinner."

Seeing her surprise, he laughed "You'll be there in plenty of time."

"And will you?"

"Of course."

As Claire left he noticed a purse lying on his desk. He was about to call. He saw that she had her bag. This was Roen's purse.

He picked it up. He became excited and stuffed it in his pocket. He would take it to her. Of course!

The Modern Madonna in a Changing World

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

"There is a sight all hearts beguiling—
A youthful mother to her baby smiling . . ."

DID you think the "Madonna picture" was old fashioned—too old-fashioned for display? Did you fear that the hectic parade of moderns that gesticulates by in an unbroken stream of "pictures," like mummers in a carnival-town, the parade of pictured flappers, knickers, smokers, drinkers, petters, jokers, "vampers," spoonders, dressers, idlers, that marches across the white paper of all our "reading matter," would leave no place for a picture of a little mother with a downy-headed baby in her arms?

Well, it isn't so. Even though a painting of a Madonna is no longer carried through the streets by the nobles while the whole town turns out to see and admire, even though the drawing of a mother with her baby is no longer the rich frontispiece of a periodical, even though the kindly day of the "child picture" seems gone, along with peach-basket hats, silk elbow gloves and ruffled parasols, the MOTHER HERSELF AND HER BABY ARE NOT GONE. Well, Rather NO!

The world moves. Pictures and their manners, their moods, their material changes. But pretty little mothers, swrapped in their babies fenorant of the restless world of night clubs, of the idle world of boredom, of the over-wise world of spiritual ennui, of a greedy world or a weary world, of ANY world where wives and husbands are small of soul and poverty-stricken in loyalty, are going about their infatuated business of being good little mothers. They are still, believe me, on top of that changing world.

And they will always be. And there will always be a man to think a young mother the eighth wonder of the world and the only kind of a girl who is worth being married to!

So here is a picture of a little's modern Madonna, persisting in a changing world.

here. She had kept tea waiting for over an hour.

"You're late, darling. I'm afraid the muffins are rather tough."

"I've had tea, thanks. I've told you not to bother about that. It's always going at Pinaud's."

"Yes, dear, but sometimes you like some more. Have you had a very tiring afternoon?"

Eddie consumed a leathery muffin to please her. His disposition was obliging.

"Rather not—quite a romantic one," he answered, with his mouth full.

"Did you dance with anyone distinguished?"

"Good Lord, yes! They're all distinguished at Pinaud's. I had Lady Meldreth for a partner the end of the afternoon."

"Eddie!" Mrs. Wisden sat up.

"I've danced with her before." Ed die went on with a forced nonchalance. "In fact, we've been friendly for quite a long time—two or three weeks. She's always singled me out for dancing. I think—it's a case, mother."

Mother and son exchanged glances.

"You mean—she's in love with you?"

He nodded modestly.

"That's about it. I went home with her to Orford House, and we had a long talk."

Her maternal fears were aroused.

"But, dearest, she's married. She'll only lead you away."

Eddie sprawled in his chair.

"She won't. She doesn't want to. I've told you—she's serious. I'm almost sure she'd marry me if she were free. She's all but said so."

Mrs. Wisden stared at him fondly, admiringly. Well, why shouldn't a peeress fall in love with her son? There was nothing so wonderful in that. There was worldly gain in it, at any rate, if he played his cards carefully. She was a calculating woman.

"At any rate, you can make a very useful friend of her," she said.

"That's the beauty of your career, dearest. You meet all the swells. Your services must be worth a lot to Pinaud. It's a pity he doesn't pay you a fixed salary."

"A great pity," Eddie echoed. "Pinaud does infernally well out of me—ten per cent. of all I take from my dancing partners. It's a swindle."

"I had to send a cheque for the rent today," said Mrs. Wisden. "That leaves us two pounds overdrawn. And Jill hasn't sent a penny I was banking on the money that should have come from her."

Eddie looked uncomfortable.

"I don't think we ought to depend on what Jill sends us," he said. "I bet she often goes short herself. Haven't she written?"

"Not a line—not a word for ten days."

"Perhaps she's in difficulties. It was a rotten company," Eddie reflected. "A No. 5—touring in country towns at town halls and that sort. She may be stranded."

"Then she'd have come back to London again. No, she's merely selfish, as usual. And I told her I wanted to pay the deposit on your new dress-suit."

"Oh, the old one will hang on a bit longer if we clean it up with petrol." Eddie answered blithely. "It doesn't look so dusty in the gas light. Jill's got to pay her own way, too. I shouldn't jump on her mother."

Mrs. Wisden always was down on Jill. She was no child of hers. That Jill had an extraordinarily open-hearted and open-handed nature and treated her like a real mother, made no difference at all. She had no room for Jill in her heart. Eddie filled all that restricted space.

A knock at the outer door sent the boy to his feet. He came back with a letter in his hand.

"She has written after all," he said, and handed it to his mother.

Mrs. Wisden opened it. She looked for paper-money first, but drew blank. There was only a half sheet of note paper scrawled over in large and generous handwriting. Eddie read over her shoulder.

Jasmine Cottage,
Leadhurst, Hants.

Dearys,

"This is a dud show as I was half afraid. This week we had to share out—one pound cash, so I can't send you anything.

If you're in low water, tell Ed to take the silver powder-box on my dressing-table to Attenborough's and pawn it. Not well, because Dad gave it to me on my twenty-first birthday.

It's rotten luck. Pull up your socks, dears. We'll weather the weather yet. All love,

Jill."

"P.S.—The country's lovely—all russets and browns and golds. It's good to be alive."

"Poor kid!" said Eddie. "Jill's got some pluck."

Mrs. Wisden's expression was not sympathetic. Jill's possible predicament if the company was disbanded destitute—did not trouble her. She was only thinking of the present and immediate future—the bills to be met every week, which Jill's little dole always helped.

"I see nothing to commiserate" she said. "It's poor old Jill always runs along. Her health never suffers because she has to go without luxuries, like mine does, for instance. She's one of those natural ly robust people who don't need much substance. I suppose she'll be on our hands soon."

"She never has been yet," defended Eddie. "Jill'd pawn her garters before she'd be a burden on anybody."

Mrs. Wisden tore up the letter in little bits exasperatedly.

"She's a foolish girl who might have done exceedingly well for herself and everyone else," she said "Instead of which, she's thrown away her best chances. She'll soon be thirty—and shelved."

"Give her a chance, mother. She's not twenty-six yet. She's quite different from us, but that's the beauty of her," answered the boy fondly.

"I'll pull her up when I write. Mrs. Wisden spoke through tight lips.

"Oh, well, she's bubbling over She sees the funny side of things and

IN SHOWING SYMPATHY DON'T OVERDO IT

Don't be too lavish in displaying your sympathy.

Too much so-called sympathy does not ring true.

The right kind of person does not desire to be considered a burden when in trouble.

There is a spark of pride that makes folk want to appear able to bear their own burdens.

It is easy to go too far in expressions of sympathy.

Be thoughtfully kindly, thoughtful in ways, but do not be overpostentious manner.

Real strength is always quiet in comparison to results.

Do things that represent personal effort and self-sacrifice.

Try to provide a way for those in trouble to help themselves.

Suggest things that will help to relax and mentally refresh and create condition conducive to early planning of ways.

Real sympathy and helpfulness does not necessarily mean big financial outlay.

There was a short silence while through the golden age with a reck- the Flapper planned to attack at a less daring which is bound to end in disaster."

"Old-fashioned, aren't you?" the girl jeered.

"You have just told me that I have a Janus-like face—looking both ways."

"I don't want to look back; there is no time to waste on yesterday and the things of yesterday."

"If you get what you want, you don't keep it long. It is out of date tomorrow," the widow answered.

Again a silence, during which they eyed each other. The Flapper put the first question.

"Were you in love with your husband, Mrs. Poole?"

"I certainly loved him," she said softly.

"And yet you would replace him—your yesterdays are forgotten."

It seemed to Mrs Poole that there was nothing sacred to the hard young eyes fixed on her face. They searched deep into her soul with neither sympathy or respect.

"I am twice your age, Betty."

The girl laughed—mocking laughter which stung the older woman. She feared the words to follow.

"I flatter you by not placing you on the old age list. Would you really like me to get up and give you a chair every time you appear? Would you like to have me get you a shawl when it is cool? I'd make you look—" a gesture finished the sentence.

Mrs. Poole admitted to herself that she would not like such attention from a younger woman. She wondered what was hidden under the hard exterior of the girl's words and behavior. Did she have her dreams or did she just accept facts and abide by them? Was she in love with the man whose name remained unspoken between them?

"If I had a daughter—"

"If you had a daughter she would not allow you to play this game," the Flapper declared. "It's unfair—you've had your chance."

"If you continue to think and act as you now do, you have no right to take the responsibility of marriage upon yourself."

"Looking forward" with an irritating laugh. "I'll drop my duty in the hands of nurses and maids. There are competent ones in the market."

"Stop!"

"I am getting on your nerves. I'll go tease—a man."

But the widow knew that she had been probing, not teasing.

He came, that man who had been nameless between them, and sat down on the railing.

WOMEN—WISE AND OTHERWISE

By Evangeline Weir

"I thought the Flapper meant to cling to you for life. Why do you allow her to take up so much of your time? You have not a single thought in common. It's a waste of energy to take her seriously."

"I suppose she has her dreams like all of us." Mrs Poole said kindly. "I believe she is in love with some one."

"I'm glad I'm not the man."

"Suppose you were the favored one?" she inquired.

"It's unthinkable. She's just a child—a dear, silly kitten, purring to be petted."

"Poor little flapper." Now the widow purred.

"Don't waste your sympathy on her, dear," he said.

"Why, she thinks widows are demons. That's how I first happened to notice you, she was saying you were . . . ."

"Um . . . ." It would be hard to say whether she sighed or groaned. She continued: "You nice, doddering Britisher, do you think me a demon?"

"Why——" He gasped and looked for a second like a fish swallowing hook, line, sinker and bait.

"You know I simply adore you—why—I was going to say to you . . . ."

And the widow knew she had caught her man.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL States have passed a new law making it a misdemeanor to drive an automobile with one hand. It's all right to have your mind on the girl as long as you keep your arms on the wheel.

IT'S a long road that has no yearning.

AND it's a short one that has no parking.

AUTOMOBILE pettings are dangerous. They've broken up more romances than marriage.

ONE commissioner is in favor of taking the danger signals off the highways and putting them inside the cars.

WOMEN are funny. If you try to kiss them, they're insulted. And if you don't try, they're disappointed.

A CHICAGO girl told a fellow that she went riding with him because she liked his company. He said he was sorry he didn't bring the first along.

WHEN he refused to behave himself, she got out and walked. She certainly knew her onions.

HE was a musician and she objected to his overtures.

SHE claimed that all men were the same, and yet she went out with a different one every evening.

THE poor girl is round shouldered from stepping out of sedans.

BUT she doesn't mind; she only goes riding for the walk.

SHE inherits it. Her great-grandfather hiked back from the covered wagon.

SORE feet are no longer a problem. All the hot dog stands now have chiropodists' parlors.

ONE girl got peeved the other day because she went motoring with a fellow and all he hugged was the curb.

HE never tried to kiss her on the whole trip. She wanted to sue him for taking her riding under false pretenses.

COUPLES are foolish to spoon in automobiles. You can have just as much fun on the sofa and it doesn't eat up any gas or oil.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---BY HELEN ROWLAND

ALL these questionnaires amongst college girls, as to what is the most desirable type or man to marry, will never prove anything.

* * *

The important question is not whether a man is blonde or brunette, tall or short, brilliant or quiet, snappy or steady, a success or "an also-ran," a petter or a woman-hater. It is simply whether or not he will make YOU happy.

* * *

Some women would rather suffer the tortures of jealousy with a beautiful and dashing Don Juan, than endure dullness and monotony with a devoted "old Dobbin."

* * *

Some women would rather mother a weakling than be bossed, waited on, and thought for by a magnificent tower of strength.

Some women would rather marry a poor, struggling, ambitious young man and know the thrill of working up beside him from poverty to success, than be the spoiled and petted darling of a rich old man.

* * *

Some women would rather go through life with an irresponsible playboy, never knowing where the next meal was to come from and constantly facing the bill collector than to be comfortably tied to a dull plodder who doled out their carfare and went to sleep after dinner.

* * *

Some women would rather be married to a man who went blind at the altar, and never again glanced at his wife, than to be tied to a "fashion-expert" who insisted on picking out a woman's hats and was shocked and pained at the sight or a run in her stocking.

* * *

Some women would rather have applesauce than three meals a day—and others prefer a hard-boiled business man who pays his wife's bills without question, but never pays her a compliment.

* * *

Some women yearn for a stirring plaster who comes home early to dinner and STAYS there all evening—and others feel smothered unless a man goes out to the club and leaves them ALONE, occasionally.

* * *

It all depends on what kind of man will make YOU happy.

* * *

And the sum of man that would make life on one long ecstasy for one woman might inspire another woman to mix toadstools with his mushrooms or put Paris green in his coffee.

* * *

If you get what you wanted, don't spend your life in the futile effort to model him according to another pattern. You can't turn a wheelbarrow into an airplane, or a flivver into an imported racing-car.

* * *

No man is perfect—and some of them are perfectly awful. But none of them is as bad as having to get up in the middle of the night, all by yourself, and go down and see what the noise is!

Pick you "models" to match your tastes and your temperament, learn how to handle him, stick to him—and be happy!

CULTIVATE THOUGHTS

By Lucy Lowell.

THOUGHT not only is the most valuable possession of mankind; it also is a gauge by which the character and ability of the individual are judged.

"How does he think?" asks the employer, considering a candidate for an important position.

Not "How fast can he run?" "How many revolutions of a pen can he make a minute?" "How many hours can he work at a stretch?"

Not, "How superior is he physically?" but "What are his mental processes? Are they true, well ordered, controlled? Because if they are, then he is all of those things, and a person to be respected and desired."

"As he thinketh in his heart, so is he," said a Wise Man. And his words are coming more all the time to be recognized as vital truth.

Physical prowess, once supreme, is of small consequence now when what the world wants most is mental ability—the ability to think clearly and constructively.

Fortunately thought may be cultivated and developed. The untrained mind thinks in the manner of a butterfly flashing here and there, pouncing on this and on that, wasting time in vague movement and accomplishing nothing.

The trained mind knows the value of concentration; sticking to one line of reasoning until the subject has been explored for the time being; going back to it again in search of new aspects.

Trained thought digs beneath surfaces, it considers all sides of a case. But its chief and most admirable characteristic is a refusal to remain in the rut of past thought—the tendency to forge new ways to achievement for itself.

Be popular—

Have a complexion that everyone admires

If your skin is not fresh, smooth, unblemished, here is an easy, inexpensive way to clear it: Spread on a little Resinol Ointment, letting it remain as long as you can. Then wash off with Resinol Soap and hot water, finish with a dash of cold water. Do this regularly once a day. Note how it soothes and cleanses the pores, lessens the tendency to pimples and how clear, fresh and velvety it leaves the skin.

Acid Stomach

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels, gently urging the souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggist's. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor, Charles H. Phillips, since 1875.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

They Are Still Animals

That Makes the Man Fairly Safe

THE MAN WITH THE WHIP.

This cartoon from the Columbus Dispatch is supposed to show the situation in the East.

The man with the whip represents white domination. China, a big dragon, with a head like that of a catfish, rebels against white control.

Other Asiatic nations, Turkey, Arabia, India, Egypt, are on the shelf beside "Russian Influence" and "Mohammedanism."

The question is asked, "Is white rule in Asia coming to an end? Will Asia soon become a MENACE TO THE WHITE RACES?"

This picture is comforting, although it isn't meant to be.

If you put a dragon, hyena, leopard, tiger, lion, bear and some other animals in a cage they would soon be busy fighting each other.

The people of Asia have always been fighting each other, killing each other, HATING each other.

To race hatred, bad enough, they add RELIGIOUS HATRED, worst of all.

People wonder that a handful of British, only a hundred thousand of them, in India can control 300,000,000 Asiatics. The answer is that the 300,000,000 Asiatics—Mohammedans and Hindus—hate each other bitterly, fight each other constantly, loathe and despise each other. A good Mohammedan would rataer kill one Hindu than ten Englishmen. A good Hindu would rather kill one Mohammedan than a hundred Englishmen. SO THE ENGLISH RULE.

However, you will notice that there is no representation of JAPAN in this picture. The Japanese, a thinking, self-governing people, leaders among the world's nations, are the real leaders in Asia.

They have their troubles at present, earthquakes, tidal waves, whirlwinds, financial troubles following the war. They also have socialism, communism and labor unionism, although they probably would deal swiftly with such things in an emergency.

As for the Chinese revolution, or rather the many Chinese revolutions, and what will come of them, it will take time to answer that.

This nation fortunately minds its business fairly well in China, although sometimes our statesmen cannot resist the temptation to join with Europe unnecessarily.

China's revolution is not altogether a rebellion against "white men's domination." The whites with their special territories in China, their own courts, independent of Chinese law and Chinese government, have annoyed intelligent Chinese—and no wonder.

John D. Rockefeller's millions are showing them how to take care of their sick, keep their children alive. That will help raise the population of China from four or five hundred millions to a billion. Good Christian missionaries are teaching them how to take care of their souls. That will be a blessing for them when they reach the other world.

Perhaps on the whole they are getting as much from us as we are getting from them.

Anyhow, Uncle Sam, it is to be hoped, will continue to mind his business and let the Chinese catfish-dragon decide things for itself.

Flying

Not So Tiring as Motoring

A Los Angeles business man regularly uses an airplane making Eastern business trips, according to the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce Bulletin.

On a recent trip from Central Ohio to Southern California he piloted his airplane, loaded with another man and 600 pounds of baggage, a distance of 2,500 miles in thirty hours' driving time, at a total cost of $115 for gas and oil.

He has been driving a plane for about a year, and says that while it is a trifle more difficult to learn to drive an airplane than an automobile, after once learning the fatigue of driving is considerably less in piloting a plane across the country that an automobile.

CHURCHES AT WORK FOR IMPROVEMENT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

"THEY that turn the world upside down have come hither also." This ancient charge against the church is repeated from time to time.

One of the most recent instances is Congressman Free's charges against the Federal Council of Churches in America. To these the Council has replied through the Rev. John A. Marquis. The reply states that this Council of the Churches maintains no lobby of any kind. It simply appeals to public opinion. It also declares that the program of the churches will in no way be modified by the unjustifiable attacks of forces which would, if they could, stifle the voice of the churches and weaken their influence in the life of the nation.

The Council declares that it welcomes at all times the fullest inquiry into its procedure, but resents the vague charges made against it.

One charge is that the Federal Council of the Churches is continually adding to its program undertakings non-religious in nature and outside the mission of the Church. Among these activities is specified the prohibition of the liquor traffic and other means than war for settling international disputes.

All of the Protestant churches have distinctly declared themselves in favor of the prohibition amendment and the Federal Council of the Churches are justified in taking the same stand. It represents the body of believers faithful in this position.

As to the settling of international disputes by other means than war, this question has unfortunately shifted into partisan politics, but every intelligent man who has given thought to the question must realize that the unspeakable horrors of war will never be mitigated unless there be some generally accepted plan to settle international disputes without war.

The two greatest curses of the human race are alcohol and war and the churches are justified in removing the root of these evils if they can.

Time was when doctors were satisfied to go about picking up and mending the wrecks of disease. More and more they are seeking to prevent the causes of disease and they have already obliterated such calamities as yellow fever, smallpox and malaria. This could only be done by preventive measures.

In the same way the churches for many years have satisfied themselves with trying to reform drunkards, to take care of the wreck cases of saloons and to minister to the wounded in the field of war. They have now taken a step in advance and have declared themselves in favor of the removal of the alcohol menace and likewise for the removal of war.

Whether it is justified or not is to be determined by asking the question, What are churches for?

If they are merely to save souls for another world's happiness then they had better let public questions alone, but if it is to make the world a decenter place to live in they are justified in attempting to improve conditions.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

CHANGE OF SCENE.

Arrangements are being made by Commissioner of Correction SANFORD BATES for the transfer of the first batch of prisoners from the State Prison at Charlestown to do rough work incidental to the establishment of the new prison colony in Norfolk County. Influential citizens who have been interested for years in bettering the living conditions of prisoners hail this as the first step towards the abandonment of the ancient structure at PRISON POINT.

LOST.

Old-timers in CAMBRIDGE insist that this story is true. While grading property at PRISM POND some 40 years ago railroad men shunted eight freight cars off the temporary tracks into the waters of Black's Nook, a bottomless pond. The cars could never be located and engineers have worked for years in an unsuccessful attempt to fill the pit. Signs warn of the danger of quicksand.

COFFEE LOVER

CITY AUDITOR CHARLES H. THURSTON of Cambridge, who bears in large measure the burden of the University City administrative program, counts that day lost in which he is unable to enjoy copious cups of coffee. The former Cambridge Mayor leaves his office many times during the day to quaff the cup of Java.

FLOWERS

The flower beds along the various pathways in the PUBLIC GARDEN are now in full bloom making a picturesque and fragrant spot. The sacredness to Bostonians of this beauty spot so close to the heart of the city may be observed by the fact that although thousands of people stop each day to admire the flowers not a single one is picked or any of the beauty marred by vandals.

Having won first honors in two recent three-point dog shows, held at Providence and Cambridge, "Hilltherwood Pep" is now a CHAMPION. MR. AND MRS. FRED WOOLNER of Worcester, owners of this fine airedale terrier, are receiving congratulations from all over the country. During the recent Boston show, "Pep" made many friends when he appeared in the interest of the national distemper fund. At the Providence show, where he was crowned a CHAMPION, three of his pups, by different bitches, were ribbon winners.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

OUR world today is full of ostriches.

Do you remember the ostrich in your First Reader? Silly bird! If he wished to fly from danger he stuck his head in the sand and blissfully bunced himself into the belief that all was well.

Our world today is full of ostriches. Stupid human ostriches who escape reality by sinking their heads deep in piles of stubbornness and sentimentality.

Such people do not like this present world.

It bothers, bewilders and frightens them.

It makes them angry and uncomfortable and ridiculous.

It is too much work to fit into it and they don't want to try.

They will not study actual conditions and people.

They insist that all parents are good—

All homes are noble—

All children can be managed, if you're firm enough—

And all will be well if we obey our parents, save our nickels, go to church regularly and vote the straight party ticket.

If you mention the fact that many parents are not fit to be obeyed—

That many homes are little better than jails—

That even regular voters and church attendants get into swindling schemes and automobile wrecks—

If you point out the effect on modern life of equal suffrage, hip flasks, co-education, child labor, one-piece bathing suits, automobiles, chiffon stockings, flying machines, working wives, delicatessen shops, day nurseries, clinics, psychology, diets, twin beds, radios, divorces, alimony, facials, ready-made clothes, and one-room-with-kitchenette apartments and ask what is to be done about it—

Why, they merely dig in their beaks more firmly and insist that nothing at all needs to be done about it. Everything will be quite all right if we will go back to the dear old-fashioned ways and sing enough songs and eat enough gingerbread. So that's that.

There they stand, looming big and proud against the sky, with their brains parked one foot deep in sentimental sand—making your peevish arguments look like thirty cents.

But suppose fate takes a hand and Reality comes right up and bites these ostriches on the leg or bumps their tail feathers—

Suppose a high strung, misunderstood child commits suicide or goes to the dogs?

Suppose a meek worm of a wife turns at last and walks out with the chauffeur and 50 percent of the community property—

Suppose some scandal rocks their little world and proves that all their theories are bunk and blah?

Will they then come out of it and face the Truth?

No, they will not.

They would merely pull more sand over themselves and tell you to trust God and not use make-up.

What are you going to do with birds like that?
